A. F. OF L. VOTES FOR CAMPAIGN FOR A SHORTER WEEK

Convention at Detroit Unanimous in Urging Shortening of Hours as Favored by Council.

FORD PLANT LABOR POLICY ASSAILED

Constant Monotony and Tremendous Pressure Criticised by Secretary of Metal Trades Branch.

DETROIT, Oct. 9.—The Ameri-an Federation of Labor today ted unanimously to begin a na-ionwide campaign for the "pro-ressive shortening of the hours of bor and the days per week. The tion was recommended by the ecutive council.

A resolution specifically calling r the five-day week of 40 hours as amended by the committee to vor a general campaign for few-r hours of labor without mention a definite goal.

Henry Ford was praised in the marks of James M. Lynch, presi-nt of the International Typo-raphical Union.

After describing the monotony routine operations as the chief son for the shorter work week, nch said, "Ford himself could eliminate these deadening pro-sses. But he is the only em-oyer in the automobile industry o has attempted to apply the ly genuine remedy, the shorter urs of labor."

Four-Hour Day, Four-Day Week."

John C. Harding of Chicago aking for the resolution as a egate of the typographical un-, said he looked forward to "a ur-day week and a four-hour y."

The convention wound itself into iot for more than half an hour h fiery debate on a move to stitute the word "continuous" "begin" in that section of the mittee's report dealing with a and that wages march for-d step by step with the per ta increase in industrial pro-tion. The committee report d the council to begin" a vig-us advocacy of the wage policy. ice President James Duncan anded substitution of the word tinuous." President Green rec-mended adoption of the com-ittee report and this was done animously.

The convention adjourned to nday.

An emphatic statement from sident Green denying that the marks of Sherwood Eddy, secre-y for Asia of the International M. C. A., at Thursday's meeting, flected the attitude of the labor ly or its officers, was in the con-tion record today.

After explaining the circum-nces under which Eddy had ob-ned the privilege of the floor, en charged his guest with hav-violated the courtesy by dis-ssing a subject already before e convention as official business. is subject was American recogni-n of Russia.

"He assured me he would talk out the Y. M. C. A., that natural-being what we expected him to uss," Green said.

The verbal skirmish between of-rs of the Detroit Board of Com-rce and the labor convention continued today with a public ement from the commercial or-ization that "we have no apolo-to make about any assertions the American Federation of or is un-American and un-pa-ic." The statement was issued y Swis J. Flint, a director of the rd of Commerce, and C. C. Mc-Gillis Director of Public Rela-tion.

Ford Policy Criticised.

Approval of the conditions of labor he found them in the Ford plants was expressed in a formal statement issued last night by A. J. Berry secretary of the Metal Trades Department of the Federa-tion. The text of his statement fol-lows:

"I constant monotony which the r in the Ford plant, which we vid, are subject to, added to the hendous pressure which these n labor under, means that within comparatively few years they me another addition to the bin junk heap and their places taken by newer arrivals. So long new men can be con-stantly ded to the force such a plant crun, but no longer.

"Inst of tending towards help-ing the men and making them better Ericans, this system pro-vides m who cannot help being good mtial for the radical and the dem gue to work upon."

A mee from several Sacra-mento, churches urging that the 1927 vention of the Federa-tion be i in that city was read to the ntion.

PASSENGER LINERS COLLIDE IN GALE NEAR GLASGOW

Neither Caledonia Nor Aurania Is Badly Damaged, However Liners Are Able to Proceed.

By the Associated Press.

GLASGOW, Scotland, Oct. 9.—Great excitement was caused among several hundred passengers aboard the outward-bound liners Caledonia and Aurania when the two steamers collided today at Greenock in a heavy see and gale. The only damage inflicted was above the water lines and the vessels were able to proceed.

URGES ALCOHOL IN COOKING

Chef Would Introduce 7 Per Cent Cooking Mixture in United States.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—A French chef, who once cooked for emperors, arrived yesterday on the steamship Berengaria to introduce in this country a vegetable cooking mixture containing 7 per cent alcohol, if the prohibition authorities will give their permission.

He is August Escoffier, now 80 years old, who was chief chef to the Emperor Napoleon III and who in 1913 prepared a dinner for the former Kaiser of Germany, which won the latter's praise. Regarding culinary arts, the aged chef thinks that American cooking can never become "classical" without the use of alcohol.

ROY SCHOOLEY IDENTIFIED AS BANK ROBBER

St. Louis County Lawyer and Politician Named by Two Witnesses to Hold-up at Festus, Mo.

TWO WOMEN HELD IN CASE ARE FREED

Preliminary Hearing of Three of Four Men, Taken After Theft of $26,000 Proceeds.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HILLSBORO, Mo., Oct. 9.—Proceeding with almost the thoroughness of a Circuit Court trial the preliminary hearing of three of the four men charged with the $26,526 robbery of the Citizens Bank of Festus, Mo., Sept. 25, was resumed today before Justice of the Peace Phil Reilly here.

Sheriff Roy Williams was the first witness today. He told of the pursuit of the robbers and the questioning of the defendants.

Charges against Mrs. Hazel Ball and Mrs. Alice Weingartner, sisters, who were joint defendants with their husbands, Francis M. Ball and Fred Weingartner, and with Roy Schooley, St. Louis County lawyer and politician, were dropped at the conclusion of the first day's hearing at 6:15 p. m. yesterday.

"We have decided to dismiss the charges against Mrs. Ball and Mrs Weingartner because we have no evidence which links them in any way with the robbery," announced Prosecuting Attorney James G. Berkley of Jefferson County as court adjourned after hearing the testimony of five of the 23 witnesses who had been summoned.

Women Relieved By Decision.

The two women, who were sitting on a front row bench near their husbands, appeared relieved and they smiled more naturally than the outwardly cheerful aspect which they had maintained all day.

Frank R. Smith, an ex-convict, who is the fourth man charged with the robbery, has waived preliminary hearing. He was an interested spectator yesterday as his presence in court for purposes of possible identification by witnesses was asked by Emil P. Rosenberger of St. Louis, counsel for Ball and Weingartner.

Schooley was positively identified by two witnesses yesterday. Severe cross-examination by Verne R. C. Lacy of St. Louis, counsel for Schooley, could not weaken the firm conviction of Deputy Sheriff Edward Staat that Schooley was the man who left the robbers' automobile for a few minutes and fired at him with two revolvers during a chase by county officers.

Deputy Identifies Schooley.

"That is the gentleman who was shooting at me," calmly declared Staat from the witness chair at Schooley stood up to be identified and stared boldly at the deputy.

Roger Elliott, 21 years old, of Festus, Mo., who was in the bank, identified Schooley by indicating him from the witness chair as the man who pointed at him a revolver held in the left hand and who seized his arm with the right hand, adding an order to fall on the floor, face downward, immediately. Elliott testified that he noted the license number of the fleeing bandit car and reported it.

Charles E. Porter, cashier of the bank, identified Ball as the stranger who came to the bank on the afternoon before the robbery to inquire about a Festus man who had some second-hand automobiles for sale. Porter testified that he left Ball alone for a few minutes while he telephoned for the information which the stranger sought. Porter described the robbery but declared he was unable to identify any of the defendants as participants.

Saw Men Run From Bank.

William Graham, 18, of Festus, testified that his attention was attracted by a running motor of an automobile in which a man was sitting at the steering wheel at the corner on which the bank is located just across the street from the store in which he is a clerk. He noticed three men dash out of the bank and jump into the car which raced away, he testified.

Detective Sergeant Ising of St. Louis was the last witness heard yesterday. After testifying that he has been acquainted with Ball for the past two years, he told of questioning him and the other prisoners after their arrest. On the witness stand, Sergt. Ising named a Kansas City character who was with Ball on the visit to Festus the day before the robbery. This man is being sought for questioning. Ising testified that he questioned the prisoners at 1 a. m. on the Sunday following the rob-

INDIANA GRAFT CHARGES UNDER FEDERAL INQUIRY

U. S. Agent Interviews "Dragon" but Says He Got Little New Information.

VINCENNES EDITOR ALREADY QUESTIONED

Particular Phase Under Inquiry Involves State Highway Department and Sale of War Supplies.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—The Department of Justice today took a hand in the investigation of charges of political corruption in Indiana growing out of statements attributed to D. C. Stephenson, former State Ku Klux Klan leader, now serving a life sentence in the Michigan penitentiary.

A declaration said to have been made by Stephenson in correspondence that he could explain "framed indictments" against members of the State Highway Commission prompted the Federal authorities to enter the case.

The Department of Justice previously conducted an investigation into the highway commission involving the sale and disposal of war supplies, although some members of the commission were indicted in the State courts the Federal Government never preferred charges.

The Federal investigation of the highway commission was conducted by Oscar Luhring, Assistant Attorney-General and a former member of Congress from Indiana, and he now is following up this angle of the Stephenson charges.

It is considered unlikely at the department that the Federal Government will go into the other phases of the Stephenson case, as they are said here to involve State and municipal affairs.

Federal Agent Arranges to See Stephenson.

By the Associated Press.

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Oct. 9.—An indication that the Federal Government has taken an interest in the charges that D. C. Stephenson has a tale to tell of alleged corruption in Indiana politics was given today when Jack Moroney, Department of Justice agent, said he planned to interview Stepenson in regard to the charges.

Moroney said he had interviewed Thomas H. Adams, publisher of the Vincennes Commercial, who received a letter from Stephenson saying he could tell of widespread graft.

Stephenson is in the State prison here serving a life sentence for murder. He formerly was grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan.

Moroney was uncommunicative, but it was assumed here that approval had been given at Washington for justice agents to inquire into the charges attributed to Stephenson with relation to the Federal elections and corrupt practice laws.

The warden and other prison officials declined to talk to newspaper representatives about the case. Moroney held a three-hour conference with Warden Daly, last night, it was understood, to arrange for an interview with Stephenson. Moroney returned to the prison this morning to see Stephenson and took a place in the outer office, compelled to wait there with reporters.

Refuses to Honor Order.

Warden Daly refused today to honor the order of the Superior Court of Indianapolis to send Stephenson back to that city for questioning in a civil case.

Warden Daly announced his refusal to recognize the court summons after Sheriff Hahn of Laporte County presented the order. The warden's statement follows:

"I am advised by the Attorney-General of Indiana that there is no authority to order a prisoner to appear in a civil suit. Therefore I will not take a prisoner from the institution on such a summons. No objection to taking a deposition at the institution will be raised at any time."

Sheriff Hahn saw Stephenson in his cell and read to him the summons from the Superior Court.

The warden acted on the advice of Arthur Gilliom, Attorney-General of Indiana.

2 KANSAS CITY, KAN., COMMISSIONERS HELD

Former Police Chief, Three Officers Also Indicted in Liquor Investigation.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Oct. 9.—Two City Commissioners, a former Chief of Police and three police officers were indicted by Wyandotte County grand jury last night, following an investigation of alleged vice conditions here.

Commissioner Charles D. Darnall was charged with misuse of city funds in a recent election campaign and with transporting liquor, while Commissioner F. Le Roy Cooke was charged with violating the State Corrupt Practices act by offering appointments in return for political favors.

Frank M. Wisdom, until recently Chief of Police, and a city detective are charged with the sale of liquor. Two patrolmen are alleged to have accepted a bribe from a bootlegger.

The indictments were returned as a result of evidence obtained by State Attorney-General C. B. Griffith, who charged that vice and bootlegging flourished in the city under police protection.

Mayor W. W. Gordon and Chief Wisdom recently were suspended. Both la resigned.

The indicted men were arrested here last night. The accused police officers are: William Hicks and Louis Knittel, patrolmen, and Charles Costello, a detective.

The six were at once taken before Judge E. L. Fisher and pleaded not guilty. Darnall's bond was fixed at $5500, Cooke's at $5000, Hicks' and Knittel's at $3000 and Wisdom's and Costello's at $500.

CARDS' TRAIN BREAKS RECORD ON RUN EAST

Brother Greets Lester Bell, Third Baseman, at (Altoona) Pa. Stop.

When the Cardinals' special train reached Altoona, Pa., yesterday, Warren Bell, a brakeman on the Pennsylvania Railroad, came aboard to greet his brother, Lester, third baseman of the St. Louis team. He made the run from Altoona to Harrisburg with the train and chatted with his brother about the world series.

The train which carried the Cardinals to New York made the run in 21 hours and 22 minutes, a record for a seven-car train between St. Louis and New York. The Pennsylvania's best time was made Nov. 18, 1925, when a special carrying one loaded and five empty cars took a Texas oil man to the bedside of his sister in 20 hours and 28 minutes.

The Cardinals reached New York yesterday at 3:21 p. m., having left St. Louis at 4:59 o'clock Thursday afternoon. A large body of fans left St. Louis on the American, a regular flyer to New York, at 8:59 a. m. yesterday and arrived in New York at 10:05 a. m., in plenty of time to see today's game.

Chicago Trains Install Radio Sets for Baseball Fans.

The Alton Limited, six-and-a-half-hour Chicago flyer on the Chicago & Alton, carried a special radio receiving set when it left St. Louis at 12:05 p. m. today, for the benefit of passengers who wished to hear the sixth world series game in New York as announced over KSD of the Post-Dispatch.

It is planned to use the same equipment on the Sunday afternoon train between Chicago and St. Louis if a seventh series game is played. The Alton Limited makes no stops between here and Chicago and passengers have no opportunity to hear the news during the afternoon run, except over the radio.

The Banner Blue Limited of the Wabash Railroad, which left at 12:20 p. m., for Chicago, also carried a radio receiving set in the observation car, for passengers who wished to listen in on the game at New York. If the Cardinals win today, both Wabash noon flyers tomorrow, to Chicago and to St. Louis, will be equipped with receiving sets.

JURY IN DAUGHERTY CASE STILL OUT; GETS DOCUMENTS

Five Hours of Deliberation Up to Lunch Time Today Was Without Definite Result.

JUDGE EXPLAINS LAW OF CONSPIRACY

Says Possession of Bonds Traced to Defendants Is Circumstantial Evidence, Not Proof of Guilt.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—After five hours' deliberation, including a more than two hour session last night, the jury in the Daugherty-Miller conspiracy trial had reached no decision today.

The jury received the case at 9:43 o'clock last night and remained in the jury room until 11:55. At 9:50 this morning discussion was resumed and as the morning passed no indication came from behind the guarded doors of what progress was being made.

As time passed the crowds that had thronged the corridors drifted away, until only newspapermen, defense attorneys and members of the prosecutor's staff were left waiting outside the jury room. Even the defendants had tired of waiting and had retired to a room in the building where they could rest.

At 12:45 Circuit Judge Mack went from the courtroom to his chambers in the Woolworth Building across the street, but remained on call by telephone if the jury should signify that ithad reached a verdict.

At 1 o'clock the jury was marched from the Federal Building to a restaurant, to resume their deliberations after lunch at 2 o'clock.

The jury last night sent for several documents, introduced as evidence. Attorneys said several hours would be required to examine these papers.

Daugherty and Miller, respectively Attorney-General and Allen Property Custodian during the presidency of Warren G. Harding, are charged with conspiring to defraud the Government of their best services in 1921, when $7,000,000 assets of the American Metals Co., impounded during the war, were released through their offices.

What Government Charges.

The Government alleges that the reputed conspiracy was induced by "hypodermic injections of graft" given them, directly or indirectly, by John T. King, former Republican National Committeeman from Connecticut. King was hired to "help and speed" the claim through the defendants' offices by Richard Merton, German copper magnate, who came to this country for that purpose.

Charge to Jury.

Judge Mack's charge to the jury in the main was a straightforward statement of the difference between bribery as a crime by itself with which the defendants were not charged, and conspiracy with bribery as an inducement which was the charge against them.

During the charge the defendants sat calmly on opposite sides of the counsel table, Miller chewing gum methodically and Daugherty lying back in his chair, a handkerchief covering one eye inflammed by a cold and with the other eye closed. He seemed asleep, but that he was paying close attention was evidenced by the fact that he opened his uncovered eye each time his name was mentioned.

Law of Conspiracy.

Referring to conspiracy, Judge Mack told the jury that to conspire men did not have to put their agreement in writing.

"People don't put it in writing that they are going to rob a bank," he said. "There may not even be one spoken word. There may not be so much as the raising of a hand or the nod of a head, but they are guilty of conspiracy just the same if they come to some sort of agreement in advance."

Of the bonds traced to the defendants from John T. King and alleged by the Government to constitute a bribe inducing to conspiracy, the Judge said that the mere fact that Daugherty and Miller were shown to have come into possession of th bonds did not conclusively prove that they

SITE OF MARATHON VILLAGE FOUND BY GREEK EDUCATOR

Prof. S. Sotiradis Describes Ruins At Foot of Mount Agrieliki Surrounded by Wall.

By the Associated Press.

ATHENS, Oct. 9.—Professor G. Sotiriadis of the University of Athens, has just returned here with a description of ruins of the ancient village of Marathon which he has discovered at the foot of Mount Agrieliki, about a mile from the noted mound under which were buried the Athenians who perished in the famous battle of 490 B. C.

Describing his discoveries to the correspondent, Prof. Sotiriadis said that he has found traces of the village, which was one of four in the plain of Marathon, just above a narrow pass between the mountain and a marsh.

Prof. Sotiriadis found an acropolis, or fortified citadel on the summit of Mount Agrieliki. The acropolis was surrounded by a stone wall six feet thick. Fragments of pots of classic Helenic form and some, thought to be Mycean, also were found. Excellent spring water was discovered within the walls.

Around the acropolis were numerous remains of a prehistoric settlement containing many tombs. The site of the village of Marathon communicated with the sea directly by means of an ancient canal which entered a marsh, forming a good harbor. On both sides of this artificial waterway are Roman breakwaters. The walls of a mole were visible beneath the water. This structure is believed to be the work of Herodes Atticus. Near the canal are the remains of Roman marble buildings.

COOLIDGE NAMES COMMITTEE FOR COTTON INQUIRY

Purpose Is to Get Information as to Market—Plenty of Credit Available, Says Jardine.

MELLON AND HOOVER TO INVESTIGATE

Senator Robinson of Arkansas Suggests That Federal Funds Be Used to Handle Marketing.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—A special committee of Government officials was appointed by President Coolidge today to investigate cotton market conditions and see what can be done to relieve the situation caused by the slump in prices.

The committee consists of Eugene Meyer, managing director of the War Finance Corporation and Secretaries Mellon, Jardine and Hoover.

It is instructed "to co-operate with those engaged in the production, marketing and use of cotton, to investigate the present market conditions of cotton and render such desirable assistance as can be given by the Government to the efforts already being made in the South through the financial institutions, co-operative organizations, and Federal intermediate credit banks, and otherwise."

Belief that the Federal Reserve system is able to finance the present crop on whatever sound plan may be devised was expressed to the chief executive by Secretary Mellon, while Secretary Jardine added that the crop lends itself easily to credit as it is not injured by storage.

"Credit facilities through ordinary banking channels appear to be adequate," said Secretary Jardine, "but we have in addition, if needed, the services and resources of the intermediate credit banks. It was for just such emergencies as the present that these banks were established. Those in charge of them have assured me that they are ready to do everything in their power. At present they are loaning money freely to the cotton co-operatives, and they are prepared to extend credit also to other cotton farmers.

"If this additional source of credit is needed, it may be drawn upon by creating local financial credit associations with a minimum local capital of $10,000, on which $100,000 might be borrowed for periods ranging from six months to three years at a moderate rate of interest.'

Senator Robinson (Dem.), Arkansas, in a White House conference, sought Government intervention in the cotton situation in the way of funds with which to finance orderly marketing. He predicted that a movement would be made at the December session of Congress to modify or abolish the cotton crop reporting service of the Agricultural Department. Representative Black (Dem.) of Texas, also criticized the departments' forecast and expressed the opinion that the crop had been greatly overestimated by the department.

Secretary Jardine, remarking that "it is the best interest of both producer and consumed to avoid wide fluctuations in cotton prices," declared that he did not "share the view, expressed by some, that a large crop of cotton or a large carry over from one season to the next, is a misfortune."

The cotton forecast for this year is 16,627,000 bales, the largest in history.

Yarn Spinners' Secretary Says Cotton Can't Be Kept Off Market.

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Oct. 9.—Economic disaster will prevail in the South unless conditions are altered materially before the end of the cotton harvest, in the opinion of C. Singleton Green, secretary of the Southern Yarn Spinners' Association.

He believes that the movement to withhold cotton from the market is "neither feasible nor possible."

"The last Government estimate," he declared today "placed the crop at 15,800,000 bales. At the same time last year the Government estimate was 13,900,000 bales, but at the end of the year the crop was 16,200,000 bales, an increase of 2,300,000 over the estimate.

"If conditions are the same this year, it means that the 15,800,000 bales of the estimate would be increased to 18,100,000 at the end of the harvest.

"With a carry over of 5,000,000 bales from last year this means that more than 25,000,000 bales would be on hand, a surplus of more than 8,000,000 over the American consumption.

"Even if it were feasible or possible to hold such a vast amount of cotton from the market, I cannot see that it would have a permanent effect on the price. All cotton traders would know of its existence and that it could be dumped on the market at any time the holders chose."

"I am glad to see you, gentlemen," was his greeting yesterday. "When I look back on the many years of association with you, I realize how little I have appreciated the many personal kindnesses shown to me by members of the press. They have never failed to observe the proprieties and to withhold information not given for publication. Today I am going to let you ask personal questions."

"Will you tell us," someone asked, "how you have been celebrating your birthday? When did you get up and what did you have for breakfast and for luncheon?"

Gary smiled.

"After shaving—myself," he added as an after thought, "and bathing, I got back into my bed again and read three newspapers, as usual. I read the newspapers quite faithfully. I read both sides of the questions in which I am interested. I don't think it's just to read only one side.

"Before I dressed I had for breakfast one-half of a rather small chicken, broiled, raised on my own farm. You know I am still a farmer and I work on my farm every week-end throughout the year.

"Nice Chicken Gravy."

"I also had boiled rice, cooked so that every grain stood out. That's the only way to eat rice. And, what's best of all to satisfy the palate—" here he lingered as if still tasting it—"some nice chicken gravy. Nothing is better than nice chicken gravy.

"I also had a nice baked apple, raised on the farm. Rather a large breakfast, you see. I don't have it often. I really don't have anything to say about it. My household determines what is good for me.

"What did I have to drink? I had two glasses of cold water during the meal. I drink a great deal of water.

"Then I dressed and came downtown, arriving at my office for an 11 o'clock appointment.' A committee of gentlemen from the United Steel Institute presented to me a beautiful testimonial. Look at it, gentlemen."

It was a volume bound in brown morocco, inclosing an illuminated manuscript made on vellum. Therein were engraved words of high praise and signed by many names headed by that of Charles M. Schwab.

"It is a work of art, gentlemen," he said as he raised the volume almost caressingly. "It will go down to my descendants as long as there are any, and then to whomsoever is fortunate enough to get it.

"I then received a very nice, well-worded testimonial from three or four of the largest steel associations of Germany. This demonstrates the friendship of our German competitors. It is an everlasting promise of fairness in all our business deals in the future.

"After attending to personal calls from a number of people, I spent some time looking over letters and telegrams sent to me from all over. Then I attended to some business.

Jubilee Singers Arrive.

"For luncheon I had three pieces of well-browned wheat bread toast and two small cups of tea. I had it in our own restaurant in this building."

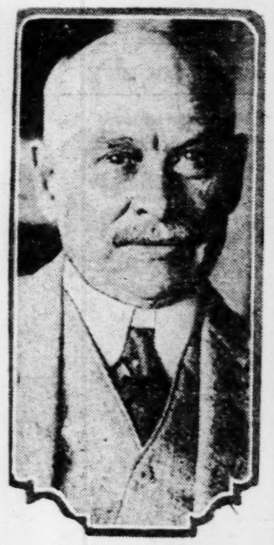

At this juncture, the ever attendant secretary came and whispered something in Gary's ear.

"Let them come in," he was heard to answer.

"Five of the Fiske jubilee singers have come to pay me a visit," he explained. "While my first choice of music is grand opera, still I am very fond of colored jubilee singers. Would you like to hear them sing for me now?"

The door opened and four Negro men and one Negro woman were ushered in and formally introduced.

The folding doors were opened, revealing a large group of men seated in the adjoining room. The leader of the group announced he had come to bring as his tribute "a nosegay from the Southland."

ELBERT H. GARY.

The opening number was "I Want to Be Ready to Walk in Jerusalem, Just Like John." The Judge leaned forward in his seat, his eyes gazing through the window overlooking the harbor and its passing ships. There was loud applause at the finish. Then came "Swanee River," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "Gideon" and, at Judge Gary's special request, "Old Black Joe." The program ended with "The End of a Perfect Day."

When the applause subsided, the Judge stood up and thanked them. "Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast," he quoted, "and most of us have savage breasts. I hope that all of us some day may meet in a better land where we can hear you sing again."

Praises Women.

He stood in the doorway while a long line of men and women passed him, silently shaking his hand. He was visibly affected when he resumed his seat.

"There are two sides to all of us," he said ruminatively. "Looking back I wish I had done better than I have. I regret all the unkind words I have ever said, all the seeming indifference I have showed to anyone who has come to ask me for assistance. I believe every one of these colored people is a better Christian than I am, and I know they will get greater rewards in the beyond than I will."

He launched on the subject of women.

"Women, given the chance," he said, "show judgment equal to that of men and perhaps a little better."

He related an interview he had with Mussolini when he first came into power.

"I don't know what you think of my Government," said Mussolini, "but I know it will last a long time, at least as long as I last."

Questions here came thick and fast. What does Gary think of Ford's five-day week. He thinks it illogical and impractical. Has Prohibition increased the efficiency of the American worker? It has, decidedly. What does he think of the proposed unionization of the automobile industry? Not much. Labor unions are becoming too arbitrary. In England they have become radically wrong. As for retiring, well, he wouldn't blame his people for wanting to replace him with a younger and better man, but, so far, no such suggestion has ever been made to him.

To young men he had the following advice to give: "There is plenty of room a little higher and nothing to prevent going higher."

Is the world getting better? Decidedly. What does he consider the most significant change? The improvement of the moral tone, especially as applied to business.

Proud of His Farming.

"How did the baseball game come out today?" he suddenly asked. "There's isn't one today," he quickly corrected himself.

"Is there any man here," he asked with a chuckle, "who does not admire Babe Ruth? He has done enough to last him quite a while."

What is Judge Gary's favorite recreation? He still loves his farming and is very proud of his results. He raises crops of grain and hay, as well as eggs and chickens. He also raised a cow that will make a record for her class. He used to love shooting, but now his best sport is walking.

Does he smoke? Here a family secret comes out. "I used to smoke considerably in college. When I came home my mother kissed me and turned her head away.

"'I don't like to kiss you,' she said, 'your breath smells of tobacco.' I haven't smoked from that day to this."

He was asked about his reading. "I would read a great deal," he said, "but I never have time. Not long ago I read a beautiful book by Washington Irving. I forget the name. Something about sketches. I don't like poetry. It's too much sen—" —someone had to help him out on the word—"sentimentalism. Yes, that's it."

Verdi is his favorite composer. But he can't go Wagner. And as for American music, it certainly is not as good as the Italian.

HAWES ARRAIGNS REPUBLICAN FARM AND LABOR POLICY

Democrat Senatorial Candidate Assails National and State Administrations in Address at Hannibal.

SAYS PARTY HAS BEEN 'MORE THAN PASSIVE'

Criticises Gov. Baker for Attempting to Employ Prison Labor in Missouri Mines.

By CURTIS A BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

HANNIBAL, Mo., Oct. 9.—The record of the Republican national and State administrations on agriculture and on labor were the subjects of attack in the speech delivered here last night by Harry B. Hawes in his campaign for election to the United States Senate.

Hawes charged that the attitude of both administrations had been more than passive, that it had been aggressively antagonistic to both the farming interests and to labor.

"The farmer has had no co-operation from the national administration, only advice to hope for the best," he said. "Gov. Baker vetoed every farm bill that came before him."

Scores Gov. Baker.

"Unless," he continued in a sarcastic vein, "that wonderful achievement, the enactment of legislation for the inspection of beauty parlors, could be considered a farm measure. Perhaps that will mean more expert marcel waves for the Hereford bull, or straightening out of the curl in the pig's tail."

Hawes asserted that the State administration sent convicts to work a coal mine in North Missouri and thus deprived miners of employment, and that Governor Baker stopped the plan only after public opinion forced him to abandon it.

"The national administration," Hawes said, "had a scheme for the manufacture of all the shoes for the army, approximately 1,000,000 pairs a year, at the Leavenworth penitentiary. That would have deprived shoe workers of work. When the matter came to my attention, I introduced a bill in Congress which resulted in the abandonment of that plan. Because of my work on that, I received letters of appreciation from shoe manufacturers and resolutions of appreciation from shoe workers and from Chambers of Commerce in cities in which shoe factories are located."

Carnival Main Attraction.

The larger portion of Hawes' speech was devoted to a discussion of the growth of centralized power in the National Government in Washington. He explained the difference in the Hamiltonian and Jeffersonian theories of government, the former advocating concentration of governmental power in the hands of a few, and the latter supporting the right of the people to govern themselves.

Hawes did not have a large audience in Hannibal, his meeting being in competition with a street carnival which occupied a dozen blocks of Hannibal streets. A wire walker on a wire suspended across a business street from the top of one tall building to another, was a greater attraction than a political speech.

The candidate will speak tonight in Jefferson City.

THREE DEAD IN FAMILY QUARREL OVER CHILD'S CARE

Man Who Objects to Sanitarium Treatment Kills Wife, Her Mother and Self.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 9.—Three persons are dead as the result of what police believe was a family quarrel over care of an adopted daughter. The dead are: Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Stacey and Mrs. A. B. Brown, Mrs. Stacey's mother.

After slaying the women late last night in Mrs. Brown's home, 1314 Olive street, Stacey sent a bullet through his own head. He died two hours later in the General Hospital.

Police believe the tragedy resulted from a quarrel of long duration over medical treatment of Hazel Stacey, 14 years old, whom the Staceys adopted when she was 2 years old from a St. Louis orphanage. The Staceys formerly lived in St. Louis.

According to police, the girl is subnormal and Mrs. Stacey and Mrs. Brown had desired to place her in a St. Louis sanitarium, a plan to which Stacey is said to have objected.

Police Seek Charles Keller, 14.

Police have been asked to search for Charles Keller, 14 years old, of 6929 Arthur avenue, who has been missing since he started for school Wednesday morning. It is believed by his family that he may have attempted to follow the Cardinals to New York after spending the last two days around Sportsman's Park.

U. S. Agent Looks Into Indiana Graft Charges

former grand dragon of the Indiana Ku Klux Klan and Republican boss of the State, shall not have an opportunity to "squeal" for the present.

That fact became clearer than ever early today when Attorney-General Arthur L. Gilliom hastily rendered an opinion to the effect that Warden Daly of the State penitentiary was not compelled to deliver Stephenson on a court order which required the prisoner to be brought to Indianapolis at once.

Daly, who is an appointee of Gov. Ed Jackson, said he would be guided by the Attorney-General's opinion. Gilliom is a member of the Republican State administration which Stephenson has promised to blow out of the water if he is allowed to produce incriminating documents and cancelled checks which he says he has in a place of security.

Daly today defied the court order, and the next move appears to be up to Judge Sidney S. Miller, of the Superior Court, who issued it.

It is possible that Daly might be cited for contempt. In that case, however, he undoubtedly would appeal, which probably would result in the delay that seems the price of life to the Republicans.

Every move thus far made by them has indicated a desperate resolve to keep the gag in Stephenson's mouth until after the November election, which involves the fate of the two Republican United States Senators, James E. Watson and Arthur Robinson.

Civil Case Unimportant.

The civil suit in which Stephenson was ordered to testify here, is of no importance. The important thing was that it might afford him an opportunity to make the revelations of graft and corruption which, in letters smuggled from the prison, he had promised to make.

The order issued by Judge Miller yesterday was the result of efforts on the part of those who have been seeking access to the prisoner, who say that he possesses and is ready to deliver abundant proof of corruption among high Republican officials in 1925, before Stephenson was convicted of the murder of Madge Oberholtzer and sent to prison for life.

Warden Consults Attorney-General.

When Warden Daly learned by telephone of the order, he immediately called Gilliom from Michigan City, where the prison is located, and asked for an opinion. Gilliom hastily consulted law books, and then replied to Daly that he "knew of no law whereby a prisoner could be required to testify in a civil suit."

Warden Daly grimly announced that this was enough for him to stand on.

Judge Miller of the Superior Court promised Prosecutor Will Remy of Marion County that Remy would be permitted to interview Stephenson on the corruption charges, during the prisoner's presence in Indianapolis.

Remy had announced on Thursday that he was ready to receive and lay before his grand jury any evidence of corruption which might be presented to him.

This was a challenge to Thomas Adams, chairman of the Republican editor's committee. Not only had Adams made public letters from Stephenson containing the corruption charges, but Adams had announced that his committee possessed a large amount of evidence from other sources corroborating Stephenson's statements.

Adams replied to the challenge by saying that while he regarded Prosecutor Remy as an honest man he did not regard him equal to the task of prosecuting the inquiry, and did not intend to jeopardize his case by prematurely exposing his hand. Unwilling to be shelved in that fashion, Remy sought Judge Miller's permission to interview Stephenson, and obtained it.

Basis of Order.

The order to produce Stephenson in a civil case was the result of a bright idea on the part of those who have been seeking access to him since the startling letters came from the prison. Stephenson once owned stock in the Hoosier Tailors, a corporation. About the time Stephenson entered prison, the corporation entered a receivership. Subsequently, the receiver got a judgment against Stephenson for $7660. As a "lifer" in the State Prison, Stephenson lost very little sleep over the fact that a civil judgment had been entered against him, and it was not satisfied.

For a week Adams, his committee of editors and the six State Senators co-operating with them, have been hammering at Gov. Jackson to let Stephenson talk. For a week, with all the earnestness of a man holding a wild bull by the horns, the Governor has declined to let go. Stephenson has remained incommunicado in prison, under the watchful eye of a Warden, who summed up his philosophy of the case in the terse sentence: "To hell with public opinion. We're running this prison."

Then somebody conceived the bright idea, by recalling that a receiver has the legal right to require one against whom a judgment has been rendered to reveal his assets.

Accordingly, the Hoosier Tailors case was disinterred, and Judge Miller was asked to bring Stephenson into court and to require him to reveal his assets. The law was clear, and the order for Stephenson's forthwith appearance was granted.

That Stephenson knew a great deal, in the fantastic days when he ruled Indiana with the fiery cross and his palatial residence was known as the third house of the State Legislature," is everywhere admitted. His statements from prison that he kept documents and photographic copies of documents and is ready to produce them has caused a panic.

Hidden Documents.

In one of the letters which was smuggled out of the prison to Adams and his investigating committee, Stephenson said:

"I have in a place of security the following documents:

"1—A written contract by the terms of which a certain prominent official of the State of Indiana agreed to pay me the sum of eight hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars ($825,000) or three times the amount I expended on his election ($275,000).

"2—Notes for that amount, signed by the official in question.

"3—A written memorandum signed by the same official, acknowledging the fact that I expended $275,00 on his election, and reciting the fact that I should lose all if he was beaten, but would receive three times that amount if he was elected.

"4—A written agreement with the mayors of three large cities in Indiana, whereby they agreed to reimburse me three-fold for all the money I spent on their campaigns for election, and also agreeing to allow certain individuals to name all their appointments.

"5—Two photographic copies (and the plate) of an agreement between the mayor of a large city and an organization politician, in which the mayor agrees to allow the politician to name all appointees of a certain class. Also the affidavits of eight men who saw the copies made from the original. I delivered the original to the politician.

"6—Thirty or 40 contracts with less important public officials, agreeing to repay me for funds advanced to them for organization purposes."

Ready to Deliver Papers.

The whole ghastly lot would be delivered to the Adams committee, Stephenson said, if he were permitted to lay hands on them, or were permitted to tell the committee to get them.

It will be observed that Stephenson gave no names. In some instances he would as well have done so. When he speaks of spending $275,000 on the election of a single State official, every Indianan knows precisely whom he means. There is but one State official for which such a sum should conceivably be spent.

The inference that he was to be repaid out of graft is inescapable.

Stephenson's Motive.

Stephenson's offer obviously was not made out of a sense of public duty or as the fruit of remorse. He makes no such lofty pretense. He admits plainly that he has two purposes: first, to avenge himself upon those friends and beneficiaries who deserted him when he fell; and second to establish a basis for appealing his murder sentence.

The second purpose is based on the following theory: Stephenson denies that he murdered Madge Oberholtzer. He claims that he was railroaded to prison by politicians who wanted to be rid of him because he knew too many secrets, and because they owed him too much money. He said:

"Because I hold the documents described above and because I have the foregoing knowledge, those men framed me and sent me to prison because it was cheaper than paying me what they owed me."

The editors take little stock in Stephenson's plea of being framed. Most of them believe he is where he belongs. But they take much stock in his determination to be revenged.

As a matter of fact, his motive is immaterial to them; what they want is the incriminating evidence which he says he will produce. As has been remarked before, you don't convict crooks with the testimony of archbishops; you convict them with the testimony of the other crooks with whom they did business.

Judge Miller announced last evening that when Stephenson appeared in court his testimony would be limited strictly to the receivership case. This dampened the hopes of those who had thought his testimony might reveal the portentious secrets which they seek. However, there are other ways of killing a cat than by feeding it artichokes.

Examination of the order discloses that among the assets Stephenson is alleged to have is, "personal property consisting of money due him from certain persons." It follows that if Stephenson is asked who owes him money, he might tell about the huge sums which he says are due him from public officials.

Among those who are pressing for a full and open investigation, a conviction prevails that the only body capable of conducting such an investigation successfully over the position of the entrenched "Indiana gang" is the United States Senate Committee of which Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, is chairman. What might happen before Indiana grand juries or in Indiana courts is, in the present condition of things, problematical. But nobody believes that the "gang" could stop Jim Reed.

The Reed committee, however, was empowered to investigate improprieties in connection with the nomination and election of United States Senators. Adams and four State Senators yesterday assured the writer that they possessed evidence of such irregularities, in connection with the renomination of Senators Watson and Robinson.

New Head for Morals Squad.

Detective-Sergeant Edward S. Rice was selected by Chief Kaiser yesterday to take charge of the Morals Squad of the department, succeeding Detective-Sergeant Bernard Wille who, after serving a year, asked for another assignment. Detectives George Upton and Abner Kincer will complete the squad.

ALCOHOL DISTILLERY RAIDED

Eight Men Arrested, Liquor Seized at Gary, Ind.

By the Associated Press.

GARY, Ind., Oct. 9.—In a raid on a distilling plant here yesterday the police seized 14,000 gallons of alcohol and arrested eight men. Several months ago Edward Harris, posing as a wealthy man from Boston, enlisted the support of many citizens in what he promised would be a creditable industrial venture.

For the last seven weeks, police said, his plant has been turning out 1400 gallons of alcohol a day. The value of the confiscated liquor was placed at $120,000, retail prices.

JOIST CONCEALED HIDDEN TANK

Liquor Squad Arrests Saloon Proprietor After Discovery.

A joist on hinges, concealing a spigot and a pipe which led to a 10-gallon tank hidden in the foundation masonry, was discovered by Detective-Sergeant Coakley and his liquor squad in the basement under the saloon of Peter Gotos, 1807 Olive street, yesterday evening.

The tank was about half filled with a liquid, Coakley reported. A hole in the joist large enough to admit an ice pick which, when inserted, released the catch that held up the joist, revealed the "plant." Gotos was arrested.

Two Killed in Airplane Crash.

ROME, Oct. 9.—Two persons were killed yesterday when an airplane, sent by Czecho-Slovakia to participate for the Italian air cup, fell 800 meters during a trial flight near Montecello. Dr. Lotha, the pilot, and a passenger named Kluski were killed.

DIVORCED WIFE CLAIMS [illegible] OF $1,600,000 THOMAS ESTATE

Artist and Writer Says There Was a Separation Agreement Which Was Not Kept.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Claiming most of the $1,600,000 [illegible] estate of Edward R. Thomas, sportsman and one of the owners of the Morning Telegraph, [illegible] Elizabeth F. Thomas, second of the publisher's three wives, asked Surrogate Foley yesterday for the appointment of ancillary administrators and a continuance of the injunction restraining the executors under Thomas' will from removing the property from the State.

Mrs. Thomas bases her claim on a separation agreement she and her former husband signed [illegible] 8, 1924, a short time before she obtained a divorce. According to that agreement, she says, Thomas was to deed to the Corn Exchange Bank $200,000, from which she was to receive the income for life, and was to deliver an additional $100,000 to the bank before May 1, 1929. She also was eventually to get a portion of the trust fund set up to provide a $100,000 yearly income for Mrs. Ann Augusta Thomas, her former husband's mother.

Mrs. Thomas, an artist and writer, also claims $156,000 in settlement of a contract she says she had to write a weekly article for the Morning Telegraph at a salary of $10,400 a year for 15 years.

Since her former husband's death, the application says, she has not received her salary. The agreement, it was said, stipulated that Thomas should remain unmarried.

Thomas died, a resident of Palm Beach, Fla., July 6, 1926. His estate in that State exceeded $1,000,000. His will, filed there for probate, appointed his third wife, the former Lucy Cotton, actress, executor with Rufus James Thomas.

YOUTH, 21, SENTENCED TO [illegible]

Slayer of Druggist in Holdup Will Tell His Real Name.

By the Associated Press.

ELKHART, Ind., Oct. 9.—On his twenty-first birthday, a youth known here as John Hall was sentenced yesterday to die in the electric chair on Jan. 21 for the killing of Louis Kreidler, a South Bend, Ind., druggist, during a holdup several months ago.

The youth steadfastly has refused to give his real name or tell where his home is, maintaining that "I've got the finest mother in the world, and I'll not disgrace her. I'll die, but she will never know how."

RELIGIOUS UNITY SEARCH FOR THING ALREADY FOUND

FIND UNITY IN DIVERSITY

Discussion Itself Cited as Proof That Sectarian Differences Are Not as Great as They Have Been Supposed to Be.

G. K. Chesterton, rotund [illegible] and jovial giant of paradox, aptly was the most quoted writer last night when exponents of five brands of religion gathered to discuss "The Search for Religious Unity" on the same platform—that of Sheldon Memorial—where Chesterton held forth a few years ago.

The addresses were full of paradoxes. The meeting, part of the annual session of the American Ethical Union, itself was a paradox, as one of the speakers cited Chesterton to show. Another paradox was that Chesterton, the only living author quoted, is a "leading layman" of a sect which was not represented on the platform.

Paradoxically, the ministers outlined their inexorable convictions and doubts—depending on whose brand they were talking about—and promptly went on to a convincing statement of complete readiness to get together on broadest spiritual grounds.

The goal, a world union of all people of good will and "truce of sectarianism and the evils it inevitably generates," was set by Dr. Alfred W. Martin, leader of the New York Society for Ethical Culture. His suggestion was recognition of "diversity as nature's law in religion as everywhere else and "unity in diversity;" an "organic unity of diverse parts" like a tree "which grows only by self-differentiation into trunk branches, twigs and leaves."

Each Branch a Tree.

"Each, although a mere branch, has regarded itself as the whole tree," was the obstacle as he saw it, and he drove it home with specific, numerous, sometimes ironic citations from church history, beginning with St. Paul's perturbation about schisms in the Corinthian Church.

He derived "sect" from the Latin care, meaning to cut or cut off, which would identify it with "section," "segment," and, significant or not, "insect." Therein he differed with the etymological work of the Rev. Dr. Skeat of Cambridge University, who traced it to "sequi," meaning to follow, with the note, "wearing obscured by confusion with secare." Even the latter, however, placed "sect" in the same word family with "persecute."

More paradox came in the address of the Rev. Russell H. Stafford of Pilgrim Congregational Church. He made his bow as a "Congregational, Trinitarian, Christian Deist," and proceeded to suggest as a "rough and ready practical equation" to dispose of various differences, "Righteousness is salvation."

"The life over there will take care of itself provided righteousness here be the aim of living," elucidated. "The servant of God is the man who wills and does right. The will is as good a way to find God as the heart or mind or head although I think the mind or head is the easier way. Let God recognize his own servants."

Equality of Ditch Diggers.

He compared the job of co-operating sects to a joint ditch-digging task for millionaire and a street car conductor. "They are three to toil together, sweat together, and perchance to groan together." He added, "but by the grace of the God that's in them to get something done together.

"I don't care very much about federation of the religious unions. What we want is to work

RELIGIOUS UNITY SEARCH FOR THING ALREADY FOUND

IND UNITY IN DIVERSITY

Discussion Itself Cited as Proof That Sectarian Differences Are Not as Great as They Have Been Supposed to Be.

G. K. Chesterton, rotund and ebald giant of paradox, aptly was the most quoted writer last night when exponents of five brands of religion gathered to discuss "The Search for Religious Unity" on the same platform—that of Sheldon Memorial—where Chesterton held forth a few years ago.

The addresses were full of paradoxes. The meeting, part of the annual session of the American Ethical Union, itself was a paradox, as one of the speakers cited Chesterton to show. Another paradox was that Chesterton, the only lay author quoted, is a "leading layman" of a sect which was not represented on the platform.

Paradoxically, the ministers outlined their inexorable convictions or doubts—depending on whose brand they were talking about—and promptly went on to a convincing statement of complete readiness to get together on broadest spiritual grounds.

The goal, a world union of all people of good will and "truce to sectarianism and the evils it inevitably generates," was set by Dr. Alfred W. Martin, leader of the New York Society for Ethical Culture. His suggestion was recognition of "diversity as nature's law, in religion as everywhere else," and "unity in diversity;" an "organic unity of diverse parts" like a tree "which grows only by self-differentiation into trunk branches, twigs and leaves."

Each Branch a Tree.

"Each, although a mere branch, has regarded itself as the whole tree," was the obstacle as he saw it, and he drove it home with specific, numerous, sometimes ironic, citations from church history, beginning with St. Paul's perturbation about schisms in the Corinthian church.

He derived "sect" from the Latin secare, meaning to cut or cut off, which would identify it with "dissect," "segment," and, significant or not, "insect." Therein he differed with the etymological works of the Rev. Dr. Skeat of Cambridge University, who traced it to "sequi," meaning to follow, with the note, "meaning obscured by confusion with secare." Even that, however, placed "sect" in the same word family with "persecute."

More paradox came in the address of the Rev. Russell H. Stafford of Pilgrim Congregational Church. He made his bow as a "Congregational, Trinitarian, Christian Deist," and proceeded to suggest as a "rough and ready practical equation" to dispose of religious differences, "Righteousness is salvation."

"The life over there will take care of itself provided righteousness here be the aim of living," he elucidated. "The servant of God is the man who wills and does right. The will is as good a way to find God as the heart or mind or heart, although I think the mind or heart is the easier way. Let God recognize his own servants."

Equality of Ditch Diggers.

He compared the job of co-operating sects to a joint ditch-digging task for millionaire and a street car conductor. "They are thrown in toil together, sweat together, and perchance to groan together," he said, "but by the grace of the grit that's in them to get something done together.

"I don't care very much about Federation of the religious unions. What we want is to work side by side with one another. Harmony is a better word than unity, anyway."

"Invincible and wholesome" differences in faith were contrasted by the Rev. W. L. Sullivan of the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, with the differences that rest on ignorance and prejudice, "recurrent long after we think they are dead."

"The seemingly immortal power of religious bitterness," he said, "is a most chastening reflection. There is an anti-Catholic ad an anti-Jewish prejudice in this country which are only fit for barbarism."

Toward eradication of vicious differences he urged that "you and I use our utmost power and influence to destroy prejudice, especially in the United States"; that "we learn from one another," and that we "respect every association which teaches men something to revere."

Minds Open at Both Ends.

"I have no fear of any group who have intense convictions," he declared, "even if it is the conviction that their sect is the only one. Conviction is becoming rare. 'Open minds' too often are wide open at both ends, and well ventilated. I believe with Chesterton, that opening one's mind is, like opening one's mouth, not to keep it open for the rest of his life, but to find something solid and substantial to close down on."

"There would be unanimity of spirit if there were unanimity of practice and sincerity of practice," was the point raised by the Rabbi Samuel Thurman, who remarked that he had hurried to the symposium on religious unity upon close of services in the United Hebrew Temple, where he spoke on "Need the Jew Fear Assimilation."

"No matter what his theory may be, we do have a profound reverence and respect for anyone we know to practice, sincerely and devotedly, his religious convictions." The Rabbi's statement brought applause from members of the Ethical movement, who believe in concentrating on "works" and letting "faith" take care of itself.

Doors Open to All.

The desire for unity was itself the chief force for unity, he believed. He related that on Passover night a Jewish tradition was to leave the door open so that an angel might enter, and "not only does he enter the homes of the Israelites, but of the righteous among all of the peoples of the universe, for all o fthem share in the life to come—which, of course, identifies righteousness with salvation."

The Rev. George A. C. Campbell of Union Avenue Christian Church declared that already "the spirit of brotherhood was beginning to brood over the world." His faith was based on his own growth, that of his church and every church—"They are kinder; they don't debate and quarrel as much as they used to"—and on the "new age of science," wherein "we are thinking the whole problem of life and human relations, and adventuring together on the great causes of humanity," he said. "The great message of the universe is the message of this adventure tonight."

And then the final paradox. Horace J. Bridges, leader of the Chicago Ethical Society, cited a story of Chesterton's about an explorer who set out to find an unknown land in the South Seas, voyaged through many hardships and dangers and, coming upon a wild coast, set up the Union Jack—only to find he had landed again at Brighton Beach!

"Here," he remarked, "we have five or six earnest gentlemen who tonight embarked to find what their very presence here demonstrates they already have!"

Flood Waters Cover Most of Mississippi Levee

THE Mississippi River, which reached a crest here yesterday slightly below flood stage, was receding slowly today. Its rise, as a result of recent heavy rains, covered virtually all of the sloping downtown levee and greatly inconvenienced loading and unloading of packet boats, particularly those in the apple trade, which have been accustomed to pile their full barrels on the levee. This miniature flood here carried water well over the wharfboats of the various steamboat lines.

Stage of the river here at 7 a. m. today was 29.2 feet, a drop of .2 of a foot since yesterday. Flood stage is 30 feet. Rain is forecast for Illinois and Missouri, but unless it is heavy the Weather Bureau expects rivers of this section to continue falling, except for the Illinois River, still in serious flood for 60 miles in the Havana-Beardstown section.

In the 31 miles between Havana and Beardstown, Weather Forecaster Hayes said, the Illinois has turned virtually into a lake. Not only has it spread out over the lowlands, but its surface has only an 18-inch drop in that whole stretch, just about eliminating the current, instead of the normal nine-foot drop.

A slow rise in this section is expected to continue until tomorrow night. Stage at Beardstown today was 26.2 feet, 1.1 feet higher than in the flood of 1922, and stage at Havana was 23.2 feet. A crest of 26.4 feet is predicted for Beardstown tomorrow and 23.4 feet for Havana. The stream is falling below Beardstown and above Peru and is stationary between Henry and Peoria.

were received from King as a bribe.

"Not of itself," he said, "but it is a circumstance which you must weigh with all the other circumstances of the case. Was it a mere coincidence or was it something more? Is it reasonably consistent with innocence? That is your problem."

Three Possible Verdicts.

Judge Mack told the jurors that they could bring in three kinds of a verdict—both guilty, both innocent, or one guilty and the other innocent.

Shortly after the jury left the courtroom, Harry Daugherty left the Federal Building with his brother, Mal S. Daugherty, one of the most sensational witnesses of the trial when he was called by the Government to tell of the former Attorney-General burning records which the prosecution alleges would have proven his unquestionable guilt. Miller remained in the courtroom.

300 Documents in Evidence.

During the trial, District Attorney Buckner introduced 82 witnesses and the defendants six. Nearly 300 documents, including ledgers, hotel registers, transportation vouchers, bank and brokerage records and checks were offered in evidence.

Richard Merton, German copper magnate, testified that he paid King, formerly Republican national committeeman for Connecticut, $441,000 for expediting a claim of his family for the value of $7,000,000 of stocks in the American Metals Co., impounded when the United States entered the World War. He said ownership had been orally transferred to the neutral Societe Suisse pour Valeurs de Metaux just before the United States declared war.

Merton said that Miller delivered in person a check for $6,500,000 at a champaigne dinner which Merton gave at the Ritz in New York. Next day Merton collected the rest at a bank and gave King $391,000 in Liberty bonds, $50,000 already having been paid him by check.

Tracing of Bonds.

Testimony was given that $50,000 of these bonds found their way to a bank account of Miller's, and the proceeds from $174,000 went to the Midland National Bank of Washington Court House, Ohio, where Daugherty had an account, with those of Mal S. Daugherty, his brother and president of the bank, and of Jess Smith, Harry's right-hand man. Testimony was given that Harry Daugherty had destroyed pertinent bank records.

It was shown that the claim had been approved in three days, although others usually required much longer.

Three former assistants of Daugherty and Miller—George E. Williams, Guy D. Goff, now United States Senator from West Virginia, and Adnah R. Johnson—assumed responsibility for approving the claim.

Neither defendant testified. Mal Daugherty testified for the defense that the destroyed records concerned Harding campaign funds of which Jess Smith had charge. Max Steur, Daugherty's counsel, argued that Harry Daugherty burned the records, when as a "lonely, old man, in a moment of madness, he was being pursued by 'biting dogs' who wanted to know about campaign funds in 1919 and 1920."

Buckner told the jury that approval of the claim was due to "hypodermic injections of graft."

He contended Miller and Daugherty "stole with the very hands they raised in taking the oath of office," and that the claim was so full of holes that no subordinate could pass on it. He doubted Steuer's statement as to campaign funds, owing to the date.

William Rand, counsel for Miller, argued that if Merton should be believed as a Government witness, he should be believed as to the validity of the claim.

EMPLOYE DIES AFTER FIRE IN EAST ALTON POWDER PLANT

Man in Charge of Drying Apparatus Succumbs Seven Hours After Accident.

A fire in a smokeless powder "dry house" of the Equitable Powder Co. at East Alton yesterday resulted in the death of an employe, Clarence Summers, 31 years old, of East Brown street, Alton.

Summers, an operator in charge of powder drying apparatus, was the only employe in the frame building. He was badly burned about the face and body as he ran out. About 1200 pounds of smokeless powder were consumed, but there was no explosion, according to an official statement by the company, which explained this type of powder does not explode unless confined. The fire began at 3:30 p. m. Summers died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Alton, at 10:45 p. m.

Damage to the building and equipment was about $1000. The company announced cause of the fire had not been determined.

NEGRO HELD FOR MURDER IS LYNCHED AT DOVER, TENN.

Grand Jury Investigates Deaths of Three Negro Prisoners at Aiken, S. C.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
DOVER, Tenn., Oct. 9.—Herbert Bell, Negro, was taken from the county jail here shortly after midnight by 75 men, carried into the woods three miles from here, hanged to a tree and his body riddled with bullets.

Bell was held on a charge of murder following the clubbing to death of Rufus Joyner, 35 years old, a farmer of Parkertown, Tenn., last Sunday. Yesterday in court at Clarksville, Sheriff Ellis was forced to draw his pistol to protect the Negro and his wife from spectators in the courtroom.

By the Associated Press.
AIKEN, S. C., Oct. 9.—A grand jury was convened in special session late yesterday by Special Judge Lanham, who ordered a rigid inquiry into the lynching of three Negroes here early in the day. A Coroner's jury returned a verdict today that the Negroes came to their death "at the hands of unknown parties." Gov. Thomas G. McLeod promised a thorough investigation.

Wage Arbitrators Named.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Edgar E. Clark, former member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and William D. Baldwin, chairman of the board of the Otis Elevator Co., today were appointed neutral arbitrators in the wage dispute between the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Order of Railway Conductors and Eastern railroads. They were selected by the Board of Mediation with the approval of the disputants.

Burglary in Home of Baron Byng.

By the Associated Press.
THORPE-LE-SOKEN, England, Oct. 9.—Baron Byng's welcome home Thursday after five years as Governor General of Canada, when the villagers dragged his car two miles, had a melodramatic climax last night. When the Baron arrived at his residence, Thorpe Hall, he learned that burglars had visited the place and made away with a quantity of jewelry and other valuables.

CITY STANDS TO LOSE $83,000 IN REVENUE

Result of State Supreme Court Decision on Assessing Insurance Firms.

City officials anticipate a possible reduction of this year's tax revenue here for city, State and schools of almost $83,000 if a decision handed down by the Supreme Court en banc at Jefferson City yesterday stands. The city may ask for a rehearing of the case, which involves the assessment by St. Louis of the reserve funds and unpaid policy claims of 17 domestic insurance companies having headquarters here.

The case arose a number of years ago in the assessment of the Equitable Surety Co., which had sought to deduct these items from its personal property return. This company, objecting, maintained that section 6836 of the Revised Statutes permitted the deductions. Thereupon the city began assessing insurance companies on the basis of their capital stock. They resisted payment on this basis and recently obtained a Supreme Court decision upholding them.

Decision Again For Companies.

Accordingly, the city returned this year to an effort to assess the reserve funds and unpaid claims, as part of the total assets of the 17 companies. Its assessment against these companies' total assets aggregated $3,195,000, the tax on which would be $82,431. The companies are resisting this payment and yesterday's Supreme Court decision upholds them.

Assessor Gehner said that the combined deduction of reserve fund, unpaid claims and Government bonds, which admittedly are exempt, would serve to wipe out the total assets assessment in the case of all or nearly all of the 17 companies. A typical instance cited at the City Hall was that of the American Automobile Insurance Co., total assets of which were assessed this year at $4,875,337. It seeks to deduct $3,066,357 in reserve fund, $1,702,081 in unpaid claims and $256,869 in Government bonds, a total of $5,025,307. It owns no real estate.

In asking for a rehearing the city would point out that there is danger of the insurance companies doing a large business here without being subjected to taxation.

Ray of Hope for City.

Associate City Counselor Dolan saw a ray of hope after reading the decision today. The court did not pass on the constitutionality of the statute, permitting the deductions, because the city had not laid the proper ground work for an attack on this score, but the Court merely ruled that the statute was off the books and in force. However, Dolan pointed out, the city is claiming in other pending cases that the statute is unconstitutional, and a decision to that effect might force the companies to pay taxes on this year's assessment.

The Equitable Surety Co., which brought the suit decided yesterday, was declared insolvent in the St. Louis Circuit Court in 1919, but its receivership was virtually ended last March. State Insurance Superintendent Hyde was ordered in 1924 to sell the $275,000 in securities deposited with him by the company as its reserve, but argued that he ought to retain this to meet possible claims. In July, 1925, the Supreme Court upheld the lower court's order for the sale.

SEEKS TO SAVE BOY, 15, FROM DEATH ON GALLOWS

Superintendent of Children's Society Makes Plea to West Virginia Governor for Mitigation.

BALTIMORE, ct. 9.—George A. Harwood, superintendent of the Maryland Society to Protect Children from Cruelty and Immorality, has sent Gov. Howard M. Gore of West Virginia a plea for mitigation of the death sentence of Adam Burress, 15-year-old Welch, W. Va., boy, sentenced to hang Oct. 29, for an attack on a 9-year-old girl.

"To permit the hanging by the neck until dead of a 15-year-old boy, we feel, would be retrogressing to Tyburn Hall and the seventeenth century, when a little child who had stolen his mother's shawl was beheaded and the head set on a paling on the banks of the Thames as a warning to other children not to steal," Harwood wrote the Governor.

Queen Marie Talks of Her Plans on Visit to U. S.

Will Not Be Filmed but Will See Studios—Hopes to Prove Europe Is Not Yet Decrepit.

By the Associated Press.
PARIS, Oct. 9.—Queen Marie has given notice that she must not be filmed in the United States, even in her daily comings and goings. But she will see the inside workings of the cinema world at Hollywood as guest of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford.

She made this statement to the Marquis de Flers, literary editor of Le Figaro. When he told her of an offer of $25,000 for her to pose one day as Queen in Tolstoi's "The Resurrection" she said she "might perhaps have secured a better engagement than that.

"I am looking forward joyfully to seeing the great cities of the cinema, Los Angeles and Hollywood. Douglas Fairbanks and his wife, Mary Pickford, have promised to show me all the inner workings of that young and prodigious industry so near to being an art."

Screen Idea "Funny."

As to appearing before the screen herself, she said:

"The idea is quite funny, but unfortunately it is untrue. In any case, you may be sure that I would choose some other character. It wouldn't amuse me at all to play the queen in that film. Besides, is there a queen in the 'Resurrection'? I don't think so. I should, perhaps, have displeased the shade of Tolstoi, which would not have been nice of me. I respect great writers, whatever their ideas may be.

"I had taken precautions to clip the wings of these little fables, but the precautions evidently were insufficient. I gave notice to those on the other side of the Atlantic that I would not allow myself to be filmed, even in my daily comings and goings. I adore moving pictures, but as a spectator."

Doesn't Like Politics.

While in the United States the Queen will avoid politics, but will try to make clear the situation of her home land to the Americans.

"I am not going to indulge in any politics in America," she said. "I never do. I don't like politics. I adore Rumania and I shall serve her to the utmost of my strength and of the love I bear her. If that is called politics, then I like politics."

Rumania, the Queen added, had been the victim of an incredible number of false reports during the last few weeks, set afloat by persons whose plans were to upset the economic and industrial stability toward which Rumania is progressing.

"Of course, first of all," said the Queen, "I am going to the White House in response to the very kind invitation of the President. But I should like to consider myself as equally the guest of the whole American people, of the most illustrious as of the most modest citizens, of Mr. Ford as of the humblest of his men."

Europe Not Decrepit.

"I am going to try to make clear to Americans all questions concerning Rumania. But I shall not speak only of Rumania. I intend to try to prove to those kind enough to listen to me that old Europe is not so decrepit as some would like to make it appear, and that Europe still possesses enough effulgent intelligence, enough will power and enough idealism to pursue her world destiny."

About the errant Prince Carol, the Queen's suite continues to maintain the strictest secrecy, although it is admitted Marie will see Carol before she departs for the United States.

Prince Nicholas, who is going to America with his mother, is in London acquiring an outfit of Bond Street's latest style.

To the suite of Queen Marie on board the Leviathan has been added a radio set. It is her purpose to try to tune in on American stations.

The Queen will land in New York Oct. 18, dine at the White House Oct. 19, visit Annapolis and Baltimore Oct. 20, and the Philadelphia Exposition Oct. 21. Then she will return to New York for a few days before starting for the Pacific Coast.

bery and several times subsequently.

Ising testified that the Nash car used in the robbery and which was later recovered at Ball's clubhouse near House Spring, Mo., had been stolen Sept. 9 last from Joseph L. Cohen, 6656 Washington boulevard, University City.

Large Crowd at Hearing.

Every available bit of standing room in the courthouse auditorium was used by the several hundred residents of surrounding towns who came to the county seat for the hearing. A large number of the spectators were women and children. It frequently was necessary for Constable W. W. Powers to insist on decorum in the courtroom. Justice Reilly touched his cigar with a match soon after the hearing started and that was a signal for others to venture to "light up."

Among the auditors were numerous relatives of the defendants. Smith's wife and daughter, Dorothy, 10, followed the proceedings carefully. Mrs. Schooley brought five of their six children with her. She was slightly injured in an automobile collision on the way to Hillsboro from St. Louis.

Schooley made suggestions to Lacy often and took notes in the manner of an attorney.

Pinchot Refuses Motor Bus Permits

By the Associated Press.
HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 9.—Gov. Pinchot has refused to approve charters for motor bus transportation companies organized by the Pennsylvania and Reading Railroads, because he refused "to be implicated in fastening any such monopoly on the people of Pennsylvania." The application previously had been approved by the Public Service Commission. The Governor said the charters "are the first steps toward securing such a monopoly of transportation service over the highways of this commonwealth as the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Co. has secured in Philadelphia."

Baking Powder Case Reopened.

By the Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—After a hearing, the Federal Trade Commission has ordered a reopening of a complaint, closed several months ago, against the Royal Baking Powder Co., alleging use of unfair trade practices. It alleges the company has circulated derogatory information about its competitors.

BIRTHDAY FESTIVITIES FOR MRS. M'PHERSON

Bible Schools Give Midnight Party in Her Honor—Hearing Adjourns Until Monday.

By the Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 2.—Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson today relaxed in a jubilant celebration of her thirty-sixth birthday. The Angelus Temple pastor faced the day with the declaration that never has she been so "absolutely assured of complete vindication."

The strain of two weeks spent in court attendance was forgotten as the preliminary hearing for the evangelist, her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, and Mrs. Lorraine Wiseman-Sielaff, on charges of criminal conspiracy stood adjourned until Monday.

The evangelist's birthday was ushered in by a "midnight surprise party," tendered her by members of her Bible schools. The festivities began with a serenade by the temple's "Silver band" and ended with the pastor serving generous slices from a huge birthday cake.

A "mysterious reason" lighted Mrs. McPherson's face as she greeted her well-wishers. The "reason," which she said she was not permitted to tell, was hinted at in the pastor's review of her asserted dealings with Oliver Allstorm, Texas poet and prosecution witness.

"I almost told you that time," she laughed.

From the witness box yesterday, Allstorm declared he had been employed to write the evangelist's experiences into a book titled "Kidnaped." It was to relate her adventure at the hands of her alleged kidnapers, who she says took her from the beach at Ocean Park, on May 18, and held her for ransom until she escaped and fled to Douglas, Ariz., 36 days later.

Mrs. McPherson explained that Allstrom had been paid for his labor and discharged after writing two chapters of the projected work in the first person, a feature which she said was objectionable to her. She declared she refused Allstorm's offer to buy the book.

Meanwhile District Attorney Keyes concentrated his detectives on a renewed search for Kenneth G. Ormiston, former Angelus Temple radio operator and co-defendant in the conspiracy case. Ormiston was declared to be a fugitive from justice following the filing of charges that the religious leader remained in hiding with the radio man at Carmel-by-the-Sea during a part of the time she was missing. Ormiston is accused of having assisted in the preparation of false evidence to support the kidnaping story.

Politics and Health in St. Louis.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

POLITICS seem to be paramount and health secondary. At the very incipiency of this institution (City Hospital No. 2) it was intended to be a political subterfuge to hoodwink the Negro voter.

Statistics are compiled daily concerning the appalling death rate of Negroes. It is indeed too bad that Negro health has to be jeopardized in City Hospital No. 2 on account of the powerful political influences which exist.

The statement of Dr. O. F. Perdue in the daily paper of Oct. 1 is food for thought, and all Negro physicians who have had direct contact with this institution know that the statements of Dr. Perdue are correct, and we have the highest respect for the stand which he has taken in this matter.

Mr. Salisbury should get some other alibi besides inefficiency for the removal of Dr. Perdue, because it seems that one needs absolutely no brains to be superintendent of City Hospital No. 2. One starts in with his hands tied. The type of physician needed as superintendent of City Hospital No. 2 would not last even eleven months. What reputable physician would take the dictations of a nurse or ordinary layman for the operation of an institution for which he is solely responsible if he is superintendent in reality? In City Hospital No. 2 one is superintendent in name only.

Mr. Salisbury makes the statement that he requires a list of the accident cases each morning in order that he might answer the inquiries of relatives and friends of the injured. He should be ashamed of himself to try to choke that "stuff" down the throats of the public. How could he intelligently give any information concerning the condition of a patient unless he had an hourly chart of the individual? Not one intelligent person in ten thousand would think of consulting the Director of Public Welfare to ascertain the condition of a relative or friend who happened to be a patient in any city institution. Anyone would think that that office would be entirely too large to dabble in such trivial matters. DR. W. H. TYLER.

Pedestrian Demands Parkways.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

IN REGARDS to this Olive street widening, does anyone ever speak a word for the interest of the public, in other words, the street car rider (72 per cent ride the street cars) and the pedestrian?

Washington boulevard has no Parkway and it is the most difficult and dangerous street in St. Louis to cross on foot. What St. Louis needs is parkways and plenty of them. It seems like everyone is working for the "motorist." I own and drive an automobile and I feel safer in driving on a street that has a parkway.

If we are going to make St. Louis safer and more beautiful from a civic standpoint, why not start now and make Olive street with a parkway? I am surprised at the Post-Dispatch stating that the Delmar parkway is a failure.

By all means give us a parkway on Olive street. A PEDESTRIAN.

Motorbus Possibilities.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE Aldermanic Transit Committee report is interesting and should have the careful scrutiny of every St. Louisan interested in transportation here.

Amongst the other statements detrimental to the motorbus, the committee's report carries the imputation that the motorbus cannot handle a load, hence is not suitable for mass transportation.

A single motorbus line in London carries annually considerably more than a billion more passengers than are carried in the same period by the United Railways. It carries over three quarters of a billion more passengers annually than are carried in the same period by all the electric traction lines in the State of Missouri, including the United Railways, Kansas City Public Service, all the urbans, interurbans, toonervilles, and everything electrical running on tracks. It carries one hundred million more passengers than are carried by all the steam railroads in the entire United States.

This being what most of us ordinarily might consider some load, we would like to have our education broadened by having Messrs. Wimmer, Krueger, and the other gentlemen of the committee define what they consider as being the "load" that motorbus transportation cannot handle. A READER.

Feed Pythons Warm Milk.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THERE is no need to feed the pythons with pigeons or anything else alive. If the snakes are allowed to get quite hungry, they will drink warm milk, and that is all they need. No fear of them dying, they will drink the milk long before they will starve.

EAST INDIAN.

BANKERS INDORSE McFADDEN BILL.

Over the question of branch banking, the American Bankers' Association at Los Angeles indulged in the most acrimonious discussion of years. They reversed their previous position, taken a year ago, at the Chicago convention, by indorsing the McFadden banking bill—a Senate measure—without the amendments tacked on to it by the House which declared absolutely against any further expansion of branch banking.

The McFadden bill, as originally drafted, takes a slightly more generous attitude toward branch banking, by permitting National banks to have branches within the corporate limits of large cities. In order to prevent State banks, when they are members of the Federal Reserve System, from securing an undue competitive advantage over the National banks, the bill denies them the right to engage in state-wide branch banking.

Parenthetically it may be said that metropolitan bankers usually favor branch banking, as an outlet for their surplus capital, while the country bankers, who are often the financial dictators of their small communities, are against it, fearing the competition of large aggregates of metropolitan liquid capital, at possibly lower, and to them unprofitable, interest rates.

After all, the branch banking question, on which was concentrated so much bitter wrangling, is but one phase of a many-sided problem. The main objective of the McFadden bill is not branch banking, but it is to place the National banks, which are now, under the law, tied up as member banks with the Federal Reserve System, on a better competitive basis with the State banks.

Some legislative action in this direction seems necessary because the State banking laws on the whole are so much more liberal in character that National banks are inclined to renounce their national charters for those of Trust companies and State banks. A continued defection of this sort would endanger the whole structure of our Federal Reserve and National bank system.

There is no question but that the Federal Reserve System, in combination with the National Banking System, has proven itself so fundamentally sound, in elastically meeting every financial emergency which has arisen in this country, it would be nothing short of catastrophic to endanger its proper functioning for the nation as a whole. State banks cannot meet national needs in times of crises.

The outstanding features of the Bankers' Convention is that they generally agree that remedial legislation is needed, and it can be said, without attempting to discuss the various provisions of the McFadden bill, that it is a wise and meritorious piece of proposed legislation, which should be promptly passed at the next session of Congress.

ENTERING THE STRETCH.

The city that shrieked and laughed a few days ago, today is restless and a bit nervous. It has reached a new crisis, this town that takes its baseball so seriously. It is kicking pebbles and straining toward the rising sun. Like the challenger who has sent the champion reeling across the ring, only to feel him rushing back in a cloud of fists, it bores in again, a little puzzled but head back and guard up.

Only two games of the world series remain. The Yankees have won three, the Cardinals two. Today and Sunday the last two contests are scheduled to be played in New York. If the Cards lose today, the series is over and the enemy the winner. If the Cards win today, the series is tied and the impetus of victory a distinct advantage.

With success still within arm's length, it is no time to ponder over what might have been in the past two games. We look ahead and see encouraging signs. The Cardinals are a great "road" team and a strange locale will not affect their chances. Did they not win the pennant at the tail end of a long road trip, clinching the flag in this very New York? The crafty Pennock will not start again. Alex the Great is ready. Jess Haines is rested up and the players are hitting the ball. Two straight triumphs and the championship is ours. One defeat and——

Crises like this test a team's nerve and try a city's courage. We hang to the radio and wait for the bell. Lay on, McNamee!

BRAZEN PROPAGANDA.

The Harriman National Bank's advertisement in a recent issue of the New York World consists of an editorial on the Philippines. It quotes what President McKinley said about the Philippines before his second nomination, to the effect that it is our duty and our opportunity, as a great, free nation, to lift up to better conditions "and larger liberty" those distant peoples, the Filipinos, who "have become our wards." The Harriman National Bank, construing this for its own purposes, adds: "No one people ever benefited another people more than we have benefited the Filipinos by taking possession of the islands. This benefit should be made permanent by bringing them in under the flag."

We think it very interesting that a bank should undertake, through a paid advertisement, to discuss a public issue of this character. The first question the reader asks himself is: "Why should the Harriman bank interest itself in the Philippine question?" The question suggests the answer. A movement is now under way to exploit the Philippines as they have never been exploited before, and to make the Philippines safe for American capital by denying the Filipinos the liberty and freedom which we have promised them. The Harriman bank is a part of that movement.

We have seen all kinds of propaganda in the last few years. But this is the frankest, boldest, most brazen sample of propaganda that has come under our notice. If all propaganda were half as bold, no one would ever be misled by it. The friends of Philippine independence owe a debt to the Harriman National Bank. Its advertisement must redound to the promotion of their ambition.

It is up to Grover Cleveland Alexander.

WHICH WAY?

It must occur to any observing person who has been going out to Sportsman's Park ever since the old Browns played there that after turning the diamond this way and that three times they have at last succeeded in getting it exactly where it ought not to be.

A fly ball lost in the sun cost the Cardinals the fifth game. In the days of the old Browns that fly ball would have gone to Tip O'Neill, who would have had the sun in his right ear and not in his eyes. In the early days of the present Browns the left fielder stood where the right fielder is standing now. Home plate was about where Hafey stands. The sun did not worry the fielders there.

There must be reason for changing the diamond three times in thirty-eight years. We wonder what it is. The sun is a serious problem in the outfield as it lies now. All visiting teams complain of it. Why not put the diamond back as it lay when St. Louis won the world's championship?

SO SAITH THE SOPHIST.

What a speech did the former Governor of Missouri, Frederick D. Gardner, make before the St. Louis Woman's Chamber of Commerce! He said that to repeal the liquor laws of Missouri under the referendum would be to flood the State with Federal prohibition agents and strip it of the last shred of its sovereignty.

Is there something left of its sovereignty? We thought the last of it went when the Missouri Legislature ratified the eighteenth amendment and established a prohibition enforcement department in the State over the heads of all officers of the State. That happened when Mr. Gardner was Governor, and the Federal Government was brought into the State over his head as well as our own.

So there is some State sovereignty left? We have 6250 State officers making a gesture of enforcing a law which the people of the State do not want and which would be totally ineffective in the State if the Government did not send in its own men to enforce it. Mr. Gardner thinks the State would be flooded with moonshine and filled with bootleggers if the State dry laws were repealed, but how the situation could be any worse than it is now we cannot imagine. Perhaps he will tell us what the State is flooded and filled with now?

Mr. Gardner is practicing a little political sophistry. He knows the sovereignty of Missouri has been destroyed. We bartered it away for home brew. He was on guard as Governor at the time and ought to remember it.

Judge Landis says it was fine for Pennock to win, but tough on Sherdel to lose. And the Judge hopes the Yankees will win if the Cardinals don't.

MAN AS ELECTRICITY.

Dr. Mae Johnson Weeks, of Brooklyn, advances the interesting theory that man is electricity, and that an ailing person should see a physiological electrician, to learn if there is a short circuit, poor insulation or inductive trouble. She goes on to say that the elixir of youth will be attained when someone finds a means to charge the human storage batteries, and keep the wires in working order.

Electro-therapy is no novelty, to be sure, and, back in the "mauve decade" the sale of electric belts, guaranteed to cure all the ills flesh is heir to, must have taken much out of the hinterland, where there wasn't so much in the first place. Men do some shocking things, and may themselves be shocked to an advantage, as a remedy or relief for certain maladies, but the idea that man or his life is electricity will be met with some skepticism, until further evidence is submitted.

All the electrical experts insist that electricity still is in its infancy, because the ablest scientists don't understand it thoroughly, regardless of the wonders it performs, and the proportion of electric light bills. Undoubtedly it will be harnessed to better effect, as experiments reveal its further possibilities, but, until some wizard produces life by turning on the juice, man will take the word of no electrical propagandist that he is it. There will remain a preference for medicine, in case of illness, and no battery expert is likely to take the place of the family physician.

If, however, it finally is demonstrated that life and electricity are as one, perhaps we shall be able to understand why people act like human beings, and some genius may arise to conquer the static of the race as well as of the radio.

PETER PIPER BRIGHTENS BRITISH.

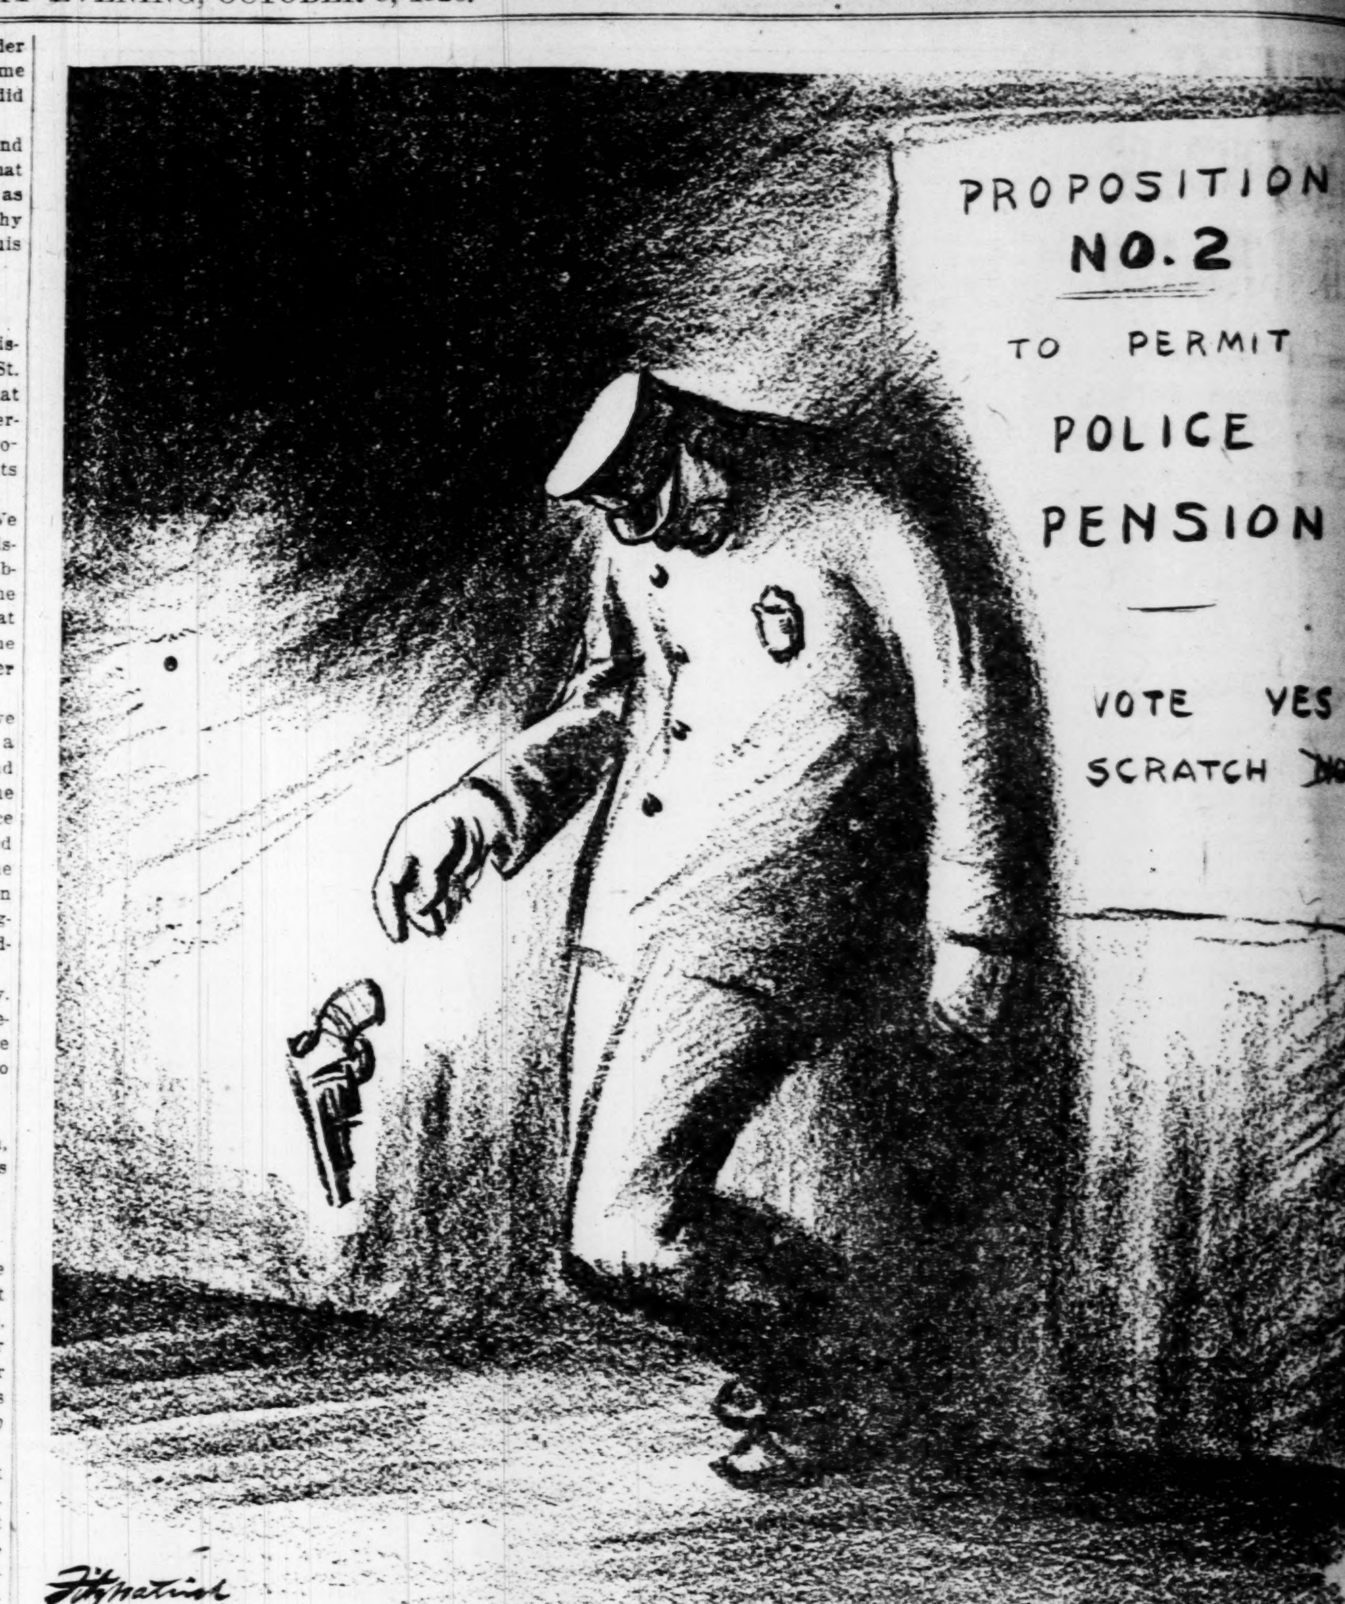

Having exhausted the amusement possibilities of the cross-word puzzle, news dispatches tell us that the British public has taken to inventing sentences of the well-known Peter Piper variety. It was long before the war that "Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers." And still the question goes the rounds among the ever-young: "If Peter Piper picked a peck of pickled peppers, where's the peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper picked?" To invent sentences in which "alliteration's artful aid" shows the most ingenuity is now diverting the British mind from the apparently hopeless coal strike and other troublesome problems.

Long ago someone invented an entire alliterative poem, going completely through the alphabet, commencing "An Austrian Army Awfully Arrayed," and ending with the awkward line: "Zeus', Zarparter's, Zoroaster's zeal," but containing such strong lines as "Kindred Kill Kinsmen, Kinsmen Kindred Kill." It is perhaps the best example of Peter Piperism in rhyme. Perhaps the best example in prose is the line that tells us that "Around the Rugged Rocks the Ragged Rascal Ran his Rural Race."

The Peter Piper fad can hardly show such vitality as did the cross-word puzzle. It must soon be exhausted. But as a stop-gap and link in the line of new amusements, it has its place. Fun for Flappers and Laughing Lounge Lizards. Wonder whether we will want wittily to worry with it?

BEAUTY CULTURE.

("Exercise your face" is the slogan of a new cult of beauty.—News item.)

In the past I'll admit that the chewing of gum
Was among my bad habits, of which I have some:
'Twas condemned by my friends, who declared that my jaws
From their efforts should sometimes be given a pause;
But no longer need I pay attention to friends,
Since my chewing of chicle may serve to good ends,
For the doctors say biting and chewing will bring
The firm jaw of big business, and that's a good thing.

When I was but a child in the days that are past,
If a child dared to pout, with the bad he was classed;
If our faces bore sign of the coming of storm,
We were sternly corrected—a pout was bad form:
But what foolish correction! Seen under the light
Of the things we now know, I don't think it was right;
We are told that the pout brings out beauty in truth,
I shall twist up my face as I did in my youth.

The glad smile that is fixed, be in sunshine or rain,
Does not go big with me, for it gives me a pain;
I could smile if my efforts were fittingly crowned,
But if things went to smash, then severely I frowned;
That is past—with a smile I have turned a new leaf,
Let the future be dark—I shall never show grief;
I have learned that the smile is the thing to put grace
In the ugliest map or the homeliest face.

But they also demand that I roll both my eyes
If I wish to obtain just the face that I prize;
I must chew, I must pout, which I can well enough,
If I smile on a lady whose escort is rough?
If I happened, while rolling my eyes as I strolled
To offend—which I might—then I might be knocked cold;
A black eye is a thing which I think out of place;
Let them have all their beauty; I'll keep my plain face.

BOOK REVIEW.

In reading "Tess of the d'Urbervilles" we felt that her misfortunes were traceable not to a careless Providence, a malignant fate, or British justice gone awry, but to a pessimistic gentleman named Hardy. "Chevrons," by Leonard Nason, gives us the same feeling. The book, while powerfully written, is unconvincing, by reason of the depths of its hero's misfortunes. It seems as though Nason deliberately threw in everything that could possibly or probably happen to a member of the A. E. F., in order to make sure that none of us would consider war as a thing in any way resembling a dinner dance. But read it anyway; it kept us awake, whereas the average novel is a guaranteed soporific. When Nason is describing battle, he reaches the heights of "The Red Badge of Courage."

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

A CARTOONIST FOR CONGRESS.

From the Hartford Courant.

JOHN HELD JR., of Weston, has been nominated for Congress by the Democrats of the Fourth District. Ordinarily the selection of a Democratic candidate for Congress in Connecticut is nothing to bring a thrill, as it is just one more name to be added to the long, long casualty list of those who have gone forth—or have been dragged forth—to the slaughter. But Mr. Held is a cartoonist and we wish, with all our soul and heart and strength, that he were a Republican cartoonist, so that he could be elected. It would certainly do him a world of good to go to Congress and the funny things which he would get at first hand would be worth more to him than the salary which Uncle Sam hands out to statesmen for services rendered. And it would do Congress a world of good. Let the reader just think what it would mean if a real cartoonist of the Held caliber could get a chance at the "Congressional Record." Instead of being as dry as dust, it would become one of the most popular works of modern literature and, if put in the hands of the book merchants, might find itself one of the "six best sellers." Even when a Congressman had his remarks extended in the Record, they might be readable, if illustrated by a man like Mr. Held. We are really sorry that he cannot be elected, but his candidacy serves to suggest that it would be a good thing to have one of his profession to make the Record a readable publication. Can't the Republicans dig up a cartoonist in some state and run him for Congress?

A BAD MONTH FOR CHAMPIONS.

From the Philadelphia Record.

THE month of September, 1926, slipped into the past, carrying the scalps of more athletic champions than any other one month has ever taken. September's first victim was Miss Glenna Collett, national woman's golf champion, who lost her crown at Merion. She went the way of Bobby Jones, amateur champion among the golfers; of Bill Tilden, six times champion in tennis, and Jack Dempsey, the world's Big Boy among the prize fighters. Of the champions in this country Walter Hagen, professional golfer, was the only one to dodge the jinx and retain his crown. It must be noted, too, that Helen Wills, woman's tennis champion, also passed out of the picture this season, but that was by default, owing to illness.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Evening Post in its copyrighted financial review today says:

"In spite of suggestions that the market gave signs of an overso[ld] condition, operators for the ri[se] were unable to arouse much enth[u]siasm among traders and many [of] the active leaders again settl[ed] back in moderately active tradi[ng] on the stock market today. Sever[al] specialties were lifted to high[er] levels, giving the list the appe[ar]ance of irregularity. Uneasine[ss] over credit conditions and develo[p]ment in the cotton market appear[ed] still to have an unsettling influen[ce] over the market, however.

No Concerted Buying.

"In the absence of concerted bu[y]ing for the advance, which probab[ly] was curtailed by approach of t[he] holiday Tuesday, leading favorit[es] in the stock market showed a te[n]dency to slide back. Moderate pre[s]sure was exerted against Gener[al] Motors, U. S. Steel, Hudson Moto[rs] and some of the other favorites a[fter] a momentary show of streng[th] at the start. Specialties were mo[re] irregular, some receiving support and others continuing to decli[ne] under pressure. Pathe dipp[ed] again, while Postum Cereal lo[st] ground and Coca Cola declined, b[ut] Pullman was in brisk demand a[nd] Case Threshing continued its r[ise]. Warner Pictures rallied after a se[t]back, while Electric Refrigerati[on] developed a steadier tone. Alli[ed] Chemical eased off slightly af[ter] an upturn. Indications that t[he] market had been fairly well stab[il]ized for the time being were se[en] in the comparatively small amou[nt] of liquidation brought out in t[he] selling. In some quarters it w[as] felt the decline had gone sufficien[t]ly far on the current movement a[nd] that rallies might be expected.

Lira Rate Higher.

"Trading in foreign exchang[e] was moderately active, and fluctu[a]tions were again irregular. A bu[rst] of strength in lire, carrying cal[l] rates back to the previous hi[gh] level of the year, was one of t[he] features. French exchange display[ed] a firmer tone. Sterling held stea[dy] while the Canadian dollar reco[v]ered to parity after selling at [a] small discount yesterday. Silv[er] rates were steadier, but the Per[u]vian pound continued to declin[e], losing 3 cents and establishing a[n]other new low record.

List Turns Dull.

"Attempts were made to div[ert] buying to the railroad stocks, b[ut] after a feeble rally the list ag[ain] turned dull. Pressure was not [di]rected against this group, but [on] the other hand buying was ha[lf]hearted, and some of the shares [of] Southern carriers lost ground in [re]sponse to the uneasiness over t[he] cotton situation. A more cheer[ful] view of the outlook for cotton [de]veloped, however, as a result of [re]ports of heavy buying in Southe[rn] cotton markets on the break y[es]terday. As a result, prices of [fu]tures here rallied more than $1 [a] bale after some slight liquidat[ion] at the start. Fears of possi[ble] damage from cold weather and t[he] of withdrawing large quantities [of] cotton from the sagging market [en]couraged shorts to cover their co[m]mitments.

Credit Situation Improves.

"An improvement in the cre[dit] situation was recorded this we[ek] according to figures revealed [in] the actual statement of the Cle[ar]ing House banks. This showed [an] excess reserve of $37,993,330 as a [re]sult of an increase in surplus [of] $61,254,050. Loans, discounts, e[tc.] decreased $83,890,000."

COTTON CLOSES HIGHER ON NEW YORK MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The cotton market opened barely steady today at unchanged prices to a decline of 9 points under continued selling inspired by yesterday's Government report and overnight selling orders from the South, which were in comparatively small volume, however. Liverpool made a relatively steady showing, and after initial offerings had been absorbed prices rallied on covering combined with some trade and investment buying. December sold up from 12.57@12.69d by the end of the first hour, or 2 points net higher and 33 points above the low level of yesterday.

Private cables said hedge selling in Liverpool had been absorbed by trade calling and covering.

The rally later extended to 12.93c for December contracts, when active months generally showed net advances of 22 to 29 points, but there was a renewal of hedge selling in the last half hour and the market lost 10 or 12 points of its gain. December closed at 12.81c, the general market closing steady at net advances of 12 to 16 points.

BONDS FAIRLY FIRM ON NEW YORK MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—With firmer money rates holding over the week end, the bond market today was forced to resist a moderate amount of selling pressure, but prices on the whole held fairly firm.

Most of the trading activity again centered in the local traction issues, reflecting satisfaction with the Chamber of Commerce recommendations for higher fares and unified system of operation. Interborough and Third Avenue Railway bonds led the advance. Higher prices also were established for foreign obligations, notably the German and French municipal issues. Cologne 6½s, advancing fractionally, were around the year's top price. In the industrial group, buying of the copper liens contrasted with the selling of miscellaneous issues, such as Dodge Brothers 6s and American Agricultural Chemical 7½s.

The investment community awaited with interest the prospective award of a Chilean loan for which three New York banking syndicates submitted bids.

Increase of 51,174 in Unfilled U. S. Steel Orders.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation on Sept. 30, made public today, totaled 3,593,509 tons, an increase of 51,174 tons, compared with the end of the preceding month.

GAINS SHOWN IN THE SMALL CURB TRADE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Relaxation of speculative operations tending to lower quotations produced a more confiding spirit in the trading on the Curb Exchange today. Business was in smaller volume and advances were recorded in most instances on few transactions.

Warner Bros. Pictures recovered about two points at the opening and Pittsburg Lake Erie improved 2½ points on the initial transaction. Glen-Alden rose about a point, while Dupont, new stock, encountered selling pressure after an early advance and suffered a loss of two points from the previous closing. Warner Bros. Pictures later cancelled its advance. Among the higher-priced issues declines of 13 points were noted in Ford Motor of Canada and 18 points in Travelers' Insurance.

Public utility shares held steady, with price changes unimportant, which condition would also apply to the early dealings in petroleum securities. A sharp break in Borne Scrymser, an inactive issue in the oil group, which sold off 20 points, had an adverse effect on others, although no undue uneasiness was discernible.

*Red wheat.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Oct. 9.—Wheat was irregular on the local market today. A lower start was followed by recovery and fractional net gain.

Wheat closed fractionally higher and corn fractionally lower.

In the local cash grain market wheat was steady with slightly better tone to market. Demand was fair. Hard wheat was steady. Demand fair. Corn was ½c to 2c lower. Demand was fair. Oats were ¼c to ½c lower. Demand was fair.

There was evening up over week-end and for Government crop report Monday. Weather conditions generally were favorable in Canada. Farm deliveries are expected on liberal scale. A Chicago dispatch said: "Dearth of any big fresh export demand for North America wheat acted as an evident weight today. In this connection it was pointed out that Duluth stocks of all grain had reached a total of about 24,500,000 bushels and the accumulation promises to continue next week.

Wheat had a fractionally lower range after the opening and corn followed a similar course. Winnipeg wheat was ½c to ⅝c lower early. Liverpool closed ½d to ⅜d higher. The advance was credited to high ocean freight. This latter was viewed bearishly on this side. Improved weather was factor in corn market.

December wheat opened at $1.36⅞; May wheat $1.41¾ and December corn 77½c to 77¼c.

The three northwestern markets combined had 1724 cars of wheat compared with 4659 a week ago and 1878 last year. Minneapolis receiving 235 cars, Duluth 130 and Winnipeg 1359.

Local wheat receipts, which were 64,400 bushels, compared with 141,400 a week ago and 32,200 last year, included 39 cars local and seven through. Corn receipts, which were 29,400 bushels, compared with 26,600 a week ago and 21,000 last year, included 21 cars local. Oats receipts, which were 50,000 bushels, compared with 78,000 a week ago and 60,000 last year included 22 cars local and three through. Hay receipts were 11 cars local and four through.

At around mid session wheat was unchanged to ¼c lower and corn ½c lower.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,204,000 bushels, compared with 1,457,000 a week ago and 1,001,000 last year. Corn receipts were 601,000 bushels, compared with 574,000 a week ago and 269,000 last year. Oats receipts were 519,000 bushels, compared with 404,000 a week ago and 584,000 last year. Wheat shipments were 760,000 bushels, compared with 1,087,000 a week ago and 557,000 last year. Corn shipments were 284,000 bushels, compared with 261,000 a week ago and 223,000 last year. Oats shipments were 351,000 bushels, compared with 315,000 a week ago and 438,000 last year.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Sales of cash grain made on the exchange Saturday: Wheat—No. 1 Red Winter Wheat, $1.41@1.42; No. 2 Red Winter, $1.38@1.40; No. 2 Red Garlicky, $1.37@1.38½; No. 1 Hard, $1.40; No. 2 hard, $1.39@1.39½; No. 5 hard musty, $1.33; sample grade Hard Wheat, $1; No. 4 Mixed, $1.36. Corn—No. 2 Yellow Corn, 80½@81½c; No. 3 yellow, 79@80½c; No. 4 Yellow, 77½c; No. 6 Yellow, 75½c; No. 2 White, 81½@82½c. Oats—No. 3 White, 43@43¾c; sample grade White, 37@41½c.

St. Louis Hay Market.

There was little or no change in the timothy hay situation, receipts being moderate and the quality of the offerings rather poor. Demand continued good for the better grades. Light clover-mixed firm. Heavy clover-mixed scarce. Pure clover hay firm. No pure clover hay offered. There continued good demand for the better grades of alfalfa, but the lower grades in liberal supply and dull. Prairie market steady.

Hay quotations: No. 1 timothy, $23 to $24; standard timothy, $21 to $22; No. 2 timothy, $18 to $20; No. 1 light clover-mixed, $22 to $23; No. 2 light clover-mixed, $19 to $20; No. 1 heavy clover-mixed, $20 to $21; No. 2 heavy clover-mixed, $18 to $19; No. 1 pure clover, $21 to $22; No. 2 pure clover, $18 to $19; choice alfalfa, $24 to $25; No. 1 alfalfa, $22 to $23; standard alfalfa, $21 to $22; No. 2 alfalfa, $18 to $20; choice prairie, $20 to $21; No. 1 prairie, $19 to $20; No. 2 prairie, $16 to $18.

UNCHANGED TO HIGHER CLOSE TO WHEAT

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—With the Government crop report due on Monday and with week-end evening-up of accounts in progress, the wheat market developed a little strength today after an early show of weakness. Trade was light, however, and the market easily influenced, buying orders appearing on the breaks whereas there were increased offerings on the bulges. Weather conditions in Canada were generally favorable, and farm deliveries there are expected to continue on a liberal scale.

Wheat closed unsettled, at the same as yesterday's finish to ⅝c higher, corn ¼c to ⅝c down, oats ⅛c off and provisions varying from 10c decline to an equal advance.

Dearth of any big fresh export demand for North American wheat acted as an evident weight today at times on wheat values. In this connection, it was pointed out that Duluth stocks of all grain had reached a total of about 24,500,000 bushels, and that with only a few boats loading and foreign demand small the accumulation promises to continue next week.

On the other hand, friends of higher prices for wheat urged that notwithstanding high freight rates on the Atlantic Europe must remain dependent on North America for the bulk of supply from week to week until the Southern Hemisphere ships more heavily. This apparently will be at least several weeks off, and in any event European importers may prefer the short haul from North America rather than the long trip to south of the equator.

3 MORE CONVICTED OF MAIL ROBBERY AT SPRINGFIELD, ILL

Eight St. Louisans Among 9 Men Found Guilty of Holding Up Chicago & Alton Clerks in 1923.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Oct. 9.—Nine men, eight of them St. Louisans, now stand convicted of complicity in the Chicago & Alton mail holdup here April 1, 1923, in which only $100 was obtained, the robbers abandoning $125,000 cash in their flight.

The total reached nine yesterday, when a Federal jury here convicted Lawrence O'Brien and Sam Kotofsky of St. Louis and Elmer Vigas of Springfield. The robbery is alleged to have been planned in Kotofsky's tailor shop, O'Brien is said to have driven the robbers' car, and Vigas is alleged to have concealed the robbers in his home. The penalty is 25 years' imprisonment, but for mal sentence has not been passed.

"Peewee" Shelton, Roy Madison, Joe Bouman and Morris Rudensky, all of St. Louis, were convicted by a jury here Dec. 8, 1923, and are serving 25-year sentences in Leavenworth prison; the convictions having been affirmed when appealed. Frank Stagner and Claude Smith, both of St. Louis, pleaded guilty here, June 8 last, to a conspiracy charge, and were sentenced to six and four months, respectively, in jail.

Woman Jailed for Contempt.

Trial of a tenth man, Joseph Melling of Springfield, has been postponed because of his illness.

Viola Brust of Springfield, who ran away to keep from testifying for the State at the first trial, was sentenced Jan. 14, 1924, to a year in jail for contempt.

The Springfield mail robbery was a sensational one. Four armed men held up clerks in the Chicago & Alton baggage room and escaped with five pouches of first-class mail and one pouch of registered mail. Two lookouts fired a fusillade of shots at a man who went to telephone to give the alarm. A seventh robber waited at the wheel of an automobile.

Dropped $125,000 Pouch.

All the robbers got away in the automobile, with the exception of Shelton, who was captured in a nearby alley. The robbers in their flight dropped the registered mail sack, containing $125,000 cash, and kept the other mail, worth $100.

With Shelton in custody, police next arrested Madison, as it was recalled Madison had been convicted with Shelton of robbing Mrs. Charles Stix of 26 Portland place, St. Louis, in 1920. Arrest of the others, mostly hangers-on of the Egan gang in St. Louis, quickly followed.

Kotofsky operated a tailor shop adjacent to the Mound City Trust Co., Union boulevard and St. Louis avenue, St. Louis, and it was in his shop that a policeman was having his pants mended in March, 1925, while the bank was being robbed.

POLE VAULTER FILES SUIT AGAINST A. A. U. FOR $502,800

Charles Hoff, Norwegian Champion, Charges Attack Upon Character, Seeks Expenses. Expenses.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 9.—The long promised suit of Charles Hoff, Norwegian vaulting champion, against the Amateur Athletic Union was filed in the Federal Court here yesterday, the vaulter asking for $502,800 damages for an alleged attack upon his character and athletic standing and expense money due him.

The suit names as defendants the Athletic Union, William C. Prout, F. W. Rubien and Robert Weaver, officers of the A. A. U., the Melrose Athletic Club and four other persons, members of the A. A. U. Foreign Relations Committee.

Of the total sought, $250,000 is listed as damages to character and athletic standing, a like sum as punitive damages, and $2800 as due Hoff as expense money on his tour which was halted after he refused to appear at a meet in San Francisco last spring.

After having been induced to leave his home in Oslo, Norway, on the invitation of the A. A. U and the Melrose Athletic Club of New York, Hoff declares in his suit that the defendants entered into a conspiracy to injure his standing as an amateur athlete.

Agreement on his coming to the United States had been that he would be allowed $11 a day as expense money, Hoff says, but that only $1000 was paid him throughout his American tour. An additional $2800 to cover his expenses was advanced from his own resources.

RECEIVERSHIP SUIT FILED AGAINST UNION CANDY CO.

Stockholder Charges Discord Among Directors Affects Volume of Business.

Suit for a receiver for the Union Candy Co., 309 Valentine street, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Harry J. Hesley of East St. Louis, who owns 20 shares of the company's stock valued at $2000 par. He complains that discord among the directors of the corporation has resulted in slowing up what should be a prosperious business. In the last four months, he states, the business has been at a standstill and the company owes about $80,000.

The following individuals who are directors are named as co-defendants, the petition also asking for their removal from office: Irwin J. Hesley, a brother of plaintiff; Albert N. Edwards, William P. King and Edward A. Schmid. Irwin Hesley is president of the company, which was organized in 1920. He declined to discuss the suit.

BUSINESS MEN OPEN CITY-COUNTY MERGER CAMPAIGN

Chamber of Commerce Names Committee Headed by Samuel Rosenfeld to Direct the Work.

An important part of the work of the new Greater St. Louis Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, which is to take the leadership of the campaign in support of the city-county merger plan to be voted on Oct. 26, will be to conduct meetings in St. Louis County communities and to mail pamphlets of information to county and city voters.

This activity will be carried on to offset the opposition of the County Committee Opposed to Annexation, which has been organized for some time, and of Fred Essen's county political machine, which is being mobilized now.

The Chamber committee will cooperate with the City-County Consolidation Committee, the Greater St. Louis Conference, the County Annexation League and the Greater St. Louis Club for County Women. Two weeks from next Tuesday the election will be held.

Rosenfeld Heads Committee.

Appointment of the Chamber committee was announced yesterday by President Carl F. G. Meyer and the group was organized immediately, under the chairmanship of former Circuit Judge Samuel Rosenfeld. Other members are F. W. A. Vesper, W. Palmer Clarkson, Louis H. Waltke Sr. and William T. Findly. Publicity, clerical and other forces of the Chamber will be at the committee's disposal, and it will appoint subcommittees on facts, legal phases, finance, publicity and speakers, and create a "department of lies," to answer misrepresentations.

In a statement issued for the committee, Chairman Rosenfeld said:

"We shall present the issue of a Greater St. Louis upon its merits to the voters of the city and the county. We will attack no one. We will analyze the problems of taxation, of administration, of service, in relation to schools, sanitation, transportation, water, fire protection, hospitals, zone system, police protection, automobile speed and control, Meramec River cutting development, and the very great number of other municipal services and duties involved. And we will give the facts to the people for their consideration. We consider the voters of the county and the city a jury to try the facts and we will accept their verdict upon fair presentation of the case.

Concerns Every Citizen.

"The issue of a Greater St. Louis concerns each and every citizen at the present day, it will affect our future well being in the county and city, and touches our successors, to whom we owe a duty even as our predecessors served us in planning the city of St. Louis.

"The plan of consolidation is not new. The city of San Francisco and the county of San Francisco consolidated in 1856 and for 70 years have administered the government over the city and county agricultural districts. The city people and the farmers are satisfied, and San Francisco has never sought to change the plans. That is a fair test of the system.

"This committee will actively co-operate with all existing organizations now working for a Greater St. Louis. There will be no dissension or jealousy or rivalry. We are all engaged in the same cause and will all advance together. County and city constitute one community. Our interests are identical. The difficulties and superficial differences are subjects of study, analysis and calm discussion and decision.

Information Asked For.

"We invite information and ask all persons to interest themselves and reach an unprejudiced understanding."

Considerable opposition pamphlets have been distributed by the County Committee Opposed to Annexation, which has held numerous meetings in the county to rally the "antis." It has undertaken erection of large banners on highways near the city limits and in county municipalities advocating defeat of the merger, with such slogans as "Save Kirkwood" and "Save Our Schools."

Henry S. Caulfield and Arthur V. Lashly will speak for and against the merger, respectively, at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon Wednesday.

Chicken Bone Caused Death.

By the Associated Press.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 9.—Henry H. Eastman, 54 years old, treasurer of the Hercules Powder Co., died yesterday from complications which arose from the swallowing of a chicken bone on Wednesday. Although specialists failed to discover the bone, abrasions were found. These caused inflammation which resulted in his death. His two sons, Henry H. Eastman Jr. of New York, and Alfred Eastman, a student at Yale University, were at the bedside when he died. Mrs. Eastman and her daughter, Lenore, are traveling in Italy.

EVERETT SHEPHERD BROOKS, CONFEDERATE VETERAN, DIES

Was Taken Prisoner by Union Army When Only 16 Years Old.

Funeral services for Everett Shepherd Brooks, 82 years old, once an active figure in industrial St. Louis and a Confederate veteran of the Civil War, were held yesterday from an undertaking establishment at 3621 Olive street, with interment in Bellefontaine Cemetery.

Mr. Brooks died Wednesday at the home of his son, Everett W. Brooks at Greenwood, Ind. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Frances Elgin Brooks, who was unable to attend the funeral, and two sons, Everett W. of Greenwood, Ind., and Van Houghton Brooks of St. Louis.

While in his 'teens, Mr. Brooks, who was born in Madisonville, Ky., in 1844, was taken prisoner by Union forces in the Civil War and held three days in an effort to gain information regarding Gen. Forrest's forces which were then in that neighborhood. He escaped and joined the Confederate army. After the close of the war he came to St. Louis, where he founded a hide business and later the St. Louis Dressed Beef Co. This he sold to the Swift interests in 1902.

DRIVER APPEALS FROM FINE AND WORKHOUSE SENTENCE

Ordered to Pay $25 and Serve Three Days for Careless Driving Sept. 20.

James Stubblefield, 3746 Evans avenue, was fined $25 and costs and sentenced to serve three days in the workhouse when found guilty in Police Judge Beck's court yesterday on charges of careless driving and leaving the scene of an accident. He appealed.

Stubblefield was arrested on Sept. 20 when an automobile driven by him figured in an accident in front of 4015 Page boulevard.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Col. Theodore Roosevelt arrived here last night with his neck swathed in bandages and went to the Presybterian Hospital. He is suffering from a carbuncle which developed while he was on a campaign tour in Indiana.

TWO U. S. SENATORS TO SPEAK FOR HAWES

Pat Harrison of Mississippi and Caraway of Arkansas to Be Heard in Missouri.

United States Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, the Democratic "baiter" of Republicans in the Senate and one of the attractive speakers on the Democratic side, will be in Missouri next week for eight speeches in the interest of Harry B. Hawes and the Democratic State ticket. Senator Caraway of Arkansas will deliver four speeches next week.

The Harrison dates will be: Charleston and Cape Girardeau, Wednesday; Caruthersville and Kennett, Thursday; Mexico and Fulton Friday, and Columbia and Moberly Saturday.

Itinerary of Caraway.

Caraway will speak in Springfield, Wednesday; Nevada, Thursday; Clinton, Friday, and Lexington, Saturday.

The Hawes itinerary for next week is: Fayette, Tuesday, a non-political speech before the student body of Central College; Windsor, Tuesday night; Warrensburg and Sedalia, Wednesday; Lamar and Joplin, Thursday; Harrisonville, Friday, and Kansas City, Saturday.

Judge Ewing Cockrell, who was defeated by Hawes for the senatorial nomination, will speak for him at New Franklin, Monday; Wellsville and Montgomery City, Tuesday; Troy and Bowling Green, Wednesday; Clarksville and Louisiana, Thursday; Monticello and Kahoka, Friday, and Memphis and Lancaster, Saturday.

Republican Speaking Dates.

Speaking dates have been announced by the Republican State Committee for Congressman Cleveland A. Newton and for Congressman John C. Ketcham of Michigan, who will deliver six speeches in the Missouri campaign.

The Newton dates are: Morrisville and Bolivar, Oct. 25; Neosho and Monett, Oct. 26; Marshfield and Springfield, Oct. 27; Hartville and Mountain Grove, Oct. 28; Houston and West Plains, Oct. 29, and Lebanon and Rolla, Oct. 30.

Ketcham will speak in Carrollton, Oct. 18; Chillicothe, Oct. 19; Trenton, Oct. 20; Milan, Oct. 21; Kirksville, Oct. 22, and Monticello, Oct. 23.

'LOVE NEST' OWNER A FUGITIVE

Attorney Says Frank L. Wright Won't Return to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 9.—Levi H. Bancroft, attorney, declared today that Frank Lloyd Wright, Spring Green, Wis., architect, sought as a fugitive from justice, never would return to the United States.

Bancroft, counsel in Wright's ineffectual attempt to obtain a divorce from Miriam Noel Wright, refused to disclose Wright's hiding place. The architect disappeared several weeks ago from his villa near Spring Green. Valdemar Hinzenberg, divorced husband of Mme. Milanoff, Wright's former housekeeper, made the couple fugitives from justice when he obtained a warrant charging adultery.

Knickers O. K. in New Orleans.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 9.—New Orleans school authorities unanimously approved of girl students' rights to wear knickers, when that question was presented before the parish School Board last night. The "knickerbocker discussion" was the result of action taken several days ago by Jeffersonville (Ind.) educational authorities in prohibiting a girl from attending school in that apparel.

DRIVER AGREES TO QUIT USING CAR FOR 6 MONTHS

Judge Stays Workhouse Term of 10 Days—Fine of $50 Also Imposed.

Chauncy Gavin, of 4161 St. Louis avenue, will not drive an automobile in the streets of St. Louis for at least six months. Yesterday he was found guilty in Police Judge Beck's court of driving while intoxicated and was sentenced to serve ten days in the workhouse and pay a fine of $50. He was arrested Sept. 15.

Judge Beck offered to stay execution of the workhouse sentence if Gavin would turn in his city license and pledge himself not to drive for a year. On condition that he refrain from drinking during the first six months the period was cut in half. Gavin agreed to the condition.

YOUTH ARRESTED TEN MINUTES AFTER STEALING AUTOMOBILE

Veralvous Hussmann, Former Inmate of Boonville Reformatory, Taken While Driving the Car.

"Where did you get that car?" asked Detective-Sergeant Collard of the driver of a large sedan which he stopped at Tenth street and Franklin avenue last night.

"Stole it 10 minutes ago," the driver replied, according to the police report.

So Collard arrested the driver, Veralvous Hussmann, 19 years old, who gave an address on St. Ferdinand avenue, and a youth who was riding with him. The car belonged to F. Rask, 1203 Chouteau avenue, and had been stolen from Fourteenth and St. Charles streets. Hussmann was sentenced to Boonville Reformatory for automobile theft in 1923 and was paroled in 1924.

HINDENBURG NAMES HEYE SUCCESSOR TO VON SEECKT

New Commander of Reischwehr Once Suggested to Ex-Kaiser He Ought to Resign.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—President von Hindenburg today appointed Gen. Wilhelm Heye to succeed Gen. von Seeckt, who resigned his command of the Reichswehr because of a scandal over the participation of young Prince Wilhelm in the recent maneuvers.

Gen. Heye, who has been commander of the Koenigsberg division of the Reichswehr, served as general staff officer with Von Hindenburg during the war and headed the officers who in 1918 suggested to Emperor William that he resign.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

DUMBELL. — Inquire at your bank about the gold piece to determine its value.

DOLLY. — You may procure books giving rules for card games at the Public Library or in any book store.

W. A. S.—Write to the motion picture magazines for information about the "Fighting Marines" and actors who played in the film.

W. W. W.—You can procure a city map and street guide at book stores and at the larger magazine stands.

LAURA. — You will find many books at the Public Library that will tell you about the various kinds of dogs. Such information is too lengthy for this column.

DAISY D. — When one person tells another that he is pleased to have met him when an introduction is being made, the response may be any pleasant comment, such as "Thank you," "I am glad to have had the opportunity of meeting you; I hope to have the pleasure of seeing you again." There is no rule to follow except that of the social code decreeing that politeness is always in order.

G. M. M.—With white woodwork and green furniture in the room, the walls and ceiling may be painted a pearl gray or cream color. Wallpaper with scattered rose buds over a white background, or one of the new print patterned wallpapers would be nice. Curtains, cushions and bed cover may be gaily patterned cretonne if you used the plain wall color. If you used a patterned wall covering then use ruffly white curtains and white bed cover. Cushions may vary in color to match the colors in the wallpaper.

LEGAL INFORMATION

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

L. E. S.—A cousin can keep house for another cousin.

MRS. R. W.—Report the case to the Juvenile Court or Board of Children's Guardians.

R. M. W.—Your second marriage will be legal whether you use your maiden name in the license or your married name.

MRS. J. L.—Consult the violin dealers listed in the classified section of the telephone directory about the 1733 Cremona.

ANXIOUS DAUGHTER.—Report the case of the immigrant relative to the Immigration Office, Old Customs Building, Third and Olive streets.

D. W. B.—The man who married under an assumed name could not be prosecuted for doing so unless it was done for a fraudulent purpose.

READER OF P.-D. — Consult Clarence F. Wescoat, attorney for the Grievance Committee of the Bar Association. His office is in the Liberty Central Bank Building.

JAMES R.—Doctors, bishops and judges are addressed by their titles. Judge Blair will speak next. This is Dr. H. L. Smith. Bishop Walton will now speak.

V. R.—The man that takes you motoring might be liable for injuries to you even if your parents signed a release prior to the journey. We assume you are a minor.

AMBITIOUS.—You will not need to have any kind of a license to teach reading or expression. We cannot advise about your lectures charges.

S. W. R.—The Federal Commissioner of Reclamation is Elwood Mead. Address Mr. Mead at the Reclamation Commissioners' Office, Interior Department, Washington, D. C.

J. T. C.—You can write in the name of any person on the ballot and your vote will be counted for the person you vote for, whether that person was nominated at the primaries or not.

THANK YOU.—The correspondence school can sue you for the amount still due them for your unfinished course and if they get judgment they can garnish your wages until the amount is paid.

INSURANCE. — The insurance company might refuse to pay a claim if you suffered a loss under the conditions you state. You had better consult the company and have the policy fixed up properly.

MRS. E. W.—You should sue for a divorce or for separate maintenance. If your husband has any property or is working he can be made to pay the cost of the divorce and your lawyer's fee. Consult a lawyer.

P.-D. READER.—You should get a divorce from your first wife and have your marriage to the second woman annulled in order to straighten out your affairs and be legally free to marry for the third time.

POST-DISPATCH READER. — The insurance company will probably investigate the wife's report about her husband, and if the company finds the report true it will undoubtedly refuse to pay the insurance claim.

ANXIOUS ONE. — We discover no violation of law in the telephone operator's case you describe, unless it amounted to obtaining money under false pretenses. You are the best judge as to whether you would be doing that.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

J. S. D.—Consult the telephone book, classified section, under medical books, for the addresses you desire.

ALBERT G.—See answer to Bald Twenty which appeared in the Post-Dispatch of Sept. 28 for a remedy for falling hair.

ROSE.—See answer to Daily Reader in Post-Dispatch of Sept. 25 for remedy for dandruff. The paper is on file at the Public Library.

IDA.—See answer to W. S. in Post-Dispatch of Aug. 19 for remedy for blackheads. You will find the paper on file at the Public Library.

G. K.—The use of the ointment you ask about is absolutely harmless for you to use under the circumstances. The wearing of a brassiere does not hinder the development of the bust.

LOUIS NOBLE, MAYOR OF EAST CARONDELET, ILL., DIES

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow for Louis Noble, 70 years old, who for 20 years was Mayor of East Carondelet, Ill., who died of heart trouble yesterday at St. Mary's Hospital, East St. Louis, after an illness of several months. Services will be from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frank Lafferty, in East Carondelet, with interment in Palmer Hill Cemetery.

Mayor Noble, who was born in France, came to America as a child and, after spending his early life at French Village, near East St. Louis, removed to East Carondelet. There he prospered and became a civic leader. He was last re-elected Mayor last spring, when too ill to qualify for the office. He was owner of considerable farm property in the vicinity.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Julia Noble; a daughter, Mrs. Lafferty, and three sons, Louis Jr. of St. Louis, Henry and Alfred, together with two stepchildren, Mrs. J. McNulty and Edward Hart, 12 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

NEGRO BOY, STRUCK BY AUTO ON AUG. 10, DIES OF INJURIES

Moses Atchison, 7 years old, a Negro, of 1407 Blair avenue, died at People's Hospital Thursday of injuries suffered Aug. 10, when he was struck by an automobile driven by Dr. John S. Young of 517 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, as the boy darted into the street from behind a truck in front of 1626 Lucas avenue.

Dr. Young furnished bond for his appearance before the Coroner today. The boy was taken to city hospital No. 2 at the time of the accident and said to have suffered a fractured skull and left leg. On Sept. 6 he was taken home and 14 days later removed to People's Hospital.

Carlos McAbel, 47, a stationary engineer, of 3209 Eads avenue, suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries at 4 p. m. yesterday, when struck by a People's bus as it rounded a loop at Third street and Washington avenue.

FARMER ACQUITTED OF MURDER

BLOOMFIELD, Mo., Oct. 9.—Frank Riley, tenant farmer, charged with the murder of Charles F. McMullin, wealthy Sikeston landowner, was acquitted by a jury in Circuit Court here this morning after the jury had been deliberating only about 20 minutes. Riley's trial began Tuesday morning. The State demanded a first-degree murder verdict.

McMullin died of gunshot wounds received Jan. 1 last, during an encounter with Riley. A shot from Riley's gun penetrated McMullin's abdomen and he died after being taken to a hospital at Cairo.

Mule Dies in Stable Fire.

Fire of undetermined origin, starting in a stable and garage at 2909-11 Cass avenue at 1:10 a. m. today, destroyed a motor truck, an automobile and a mule. A horse in the stable was so badly burned it was shot by a policeman. The truck, automobile and horse was owned by James Harris of 2609 Stoddard street. The mule belonged to William Monroe, 1444 North Jefferson avenue. The loss was estimated at $1500.

U. S. Counterfeits in Jugo-Slavia.

By the Associated Press.

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Oct. 9.—The Minister of Finance has warned the public and all banks that many counterfeit American bills of $5, $10 and $20 denominations are in circulation in Jugo-Slavia. The warning says that the counterfeit bills are of imperfect imitation.

POLICY TOWARD RURAL BANKS TO BE MORE LIBERAL

New State Finance Commissioner to Give Them More Time to Realize on Frozen Loans.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 9.—A more liberal policy by the State Finance Department toward rural banks in Missouri, to permit them to gradually reduce inflated agricultural loans, instead of forcing liquidation of these credits, was announced by State Finance Commissioner S. L. Cantley in an open letter sent last night to the 1360 State banks and trust companies in Missouri.

Cantley stated his chief concern with rural banks in Missouri was their solvency, rather than the length of time required for them to realize on their loans, provided the loans were kept up and the banks had sufficient money to meet their current demands.

Farm papers should be promptly renewed when due, he said, and should be gradually reduced, not only for the protection of the banker but for the benefit of the farmer. If this was done, he stated, "there will be no disposition on my part to force liquidation of farm credits. Rather it shall be my purpose to have you prevail upon your farmer borrowers to work out rather than sell out, or walk out."

Statement of Policies.

Cantley's letter was written as a statement of the policies he will follow in the department. He was appointed Finance Commissioner on Sept. 26 last, succeeding C. E. French, who resigned to accept an executive position with a St. Louis bank. Cantley previously had served 15 months as a Deputy Finance Commissioner.

His statement dealt almost entirely with rural banks, which have been the chief problem of the department for several years, due entirely to failing agricultural credits and deflation of land values in agricultural sections of Missouri.

A total of 133 State banks and trust companies have failed in Missouri since Jan. 1, 1924. Forty-four failed in 1924, a like number in 1925, and 45 have failed so far this year. "Virtually all of these failures have occurred in the smaller towns and communities of the State.

French's Work Commended.

Cantley commended the administration of French, his predecessor, and declared the banking institutions of the State "are in vastly better condition than they were one year ago, due largely to sound banking practices advocated by him."

"I admire the city banker and want to know more of him and more about his bank and his methods of doing business," Cantley stated in the letter, "but due to the very nearly utter helplessness of the rural banker during these past years, and owing to the unliquid nature of his assets and the positive want of a market value for the collateral securing his paper, my sympathy is with him."

"The city banker frequently, if not generally, has listed collateral with a more or less fixed value, marketable any time, securing short term loans," Cantley continued, "and has thus been able to readjust his note case and to base his current loans on collateral with stable values. He had losses to be sure, but the liquid nature of his paper enabled him to take them quickly and absorb them on a sliding scale. He has been largely through with the war problem, insofar as its direct effects were concerned, for some time, but not so with the country banker."

Farm Credits Problem.

Farm credits largely had to be worked out, Cantley said. When the inflated values dropped, there was not only the shrinkage in estimated farm land values, but no sale value at any price, he said. Personal property of the farmers also depreciated and scarcely commanded a market, he stated.

"With heavy mortgages, consuming interest and largely increased operating expenses set over against demoralized values and markets for his products," Cantley said, "how could the farmer ever get out except to work out, or walk out, and many of them, thoroughly disgusted, took the latter course."

"There will be no disposition on my part to compromise violations of the banking laws," Cantley continued, "nor to countenance what are regarded as dangerous or speculative practices. The banker who attempts either may expect to have the wrath of this department visited upon him. Frequent examinations and severe criticisms are justified where the law has been contemptuously disregarded or openly violated."

Would Aid the Banks.

"A banker is a mighty good fellow so long as he loans money to every applicant on the terms of the borrower," Cantley said, "making the loan without good collateral or no collateral, and in many cases requiring no financial statement of his customer.

"The result is soon reflected in his note case, with its frozen loans and indifferent borrowers, silent reminders of his abuse of his trust as guardian of his depositors' funds," Cantley continued. "In such cases directors generally neglect to perform, officers refuse to perform, and the bank soon develops an impaired capital, depleted reserves, and finally an insolvent condition. Then, and not until then, in most cases, is the Finance Department appealed to in an effort to save the situation, which might have been saved had the bank's condition been revealed by its officers rather than concealed from the department."

VERSES ADD NEW PAGE TO HISTORY OF OMAR KHAYAM

Translation of Newly Discovered Lines Discloses They Were Written in Valley of the Sind.

(Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Newly discovered verses attributed to Omar Khayam are the subject of a letter reprinted here from the Karachi Daily Gazette.

"The verses apparently wree written," it says, "in the course of wanderings in the unhappy valley of the Sind (a river in India). It was previously not known that Omar visited that provice. Thus the find has not only added a new page to the history of life, but has given us more examples of his 'divine pessimism.'"

The following are translations made by an unidentified Indian civil servant. Sikander, referred to in the lines, is Alexander the Great who invaded India:

And we who sow intetions yer by year
Thick on the soil of grief or love or fear—
Ah, how the Babul thorn of circumstance
Chokes the young seed or yet it grew to ear!

The fans of Vishnu yield no revenue,
And only bandits render tribute due.
How is the force now faded that before
Saw gold in Ghazeni falling as the dew!

Where are Sikander and the Medians fled,
The million vermin from the far-side bed?
Where flows the flotsam on the Sindhu's tide?
Ask of the thrice asked, still unanswering dead.

VON HINDENBURG ATTENDS GERMAN ARMY MANEUVERS

Watches Sham Battle of 25,000 Men From Hilltop in Uniform of Commander-in-Chief.

BAD MERGENTHEIM, Germany, Oct. 9.—President von Hindenburg recently appeared in the uniform of Commander-in-Chief at the fall maneuvers of the Fifth and Seventh divisions.

From a hilltop, with Minister of Defense Dr. Gessler at his side, the old soldier watched the make-believe battle of 25,000 men.

Repeated charges of large bodies of cavalry supplied a dramatic note. Extensive smoke screens greatly obscured the outlook on the battle waging with varying success. Of extraordinary interest was the complete invisibility of machine gun units, only discernible throughout the vast ground by their crackling fire.

Suddenly from the hilltop a bugle sounded the halt, followed by the call for officers to assemble. The next moment officers were galloping furiously from all directions to the hill on which stood waiting to pass final judgment on the maneuvers Germany's venerable soldier-president, surrounded by the umpire staff and military observers from the United States, Spain, Latin-American republics, Hungary, Sweden, Holland and soviet Russia.

HUMAN BONES UNCOVERED IN SEARCH FOR PIRATE GOLD

Legend Says Blackbeard Killed Spaniard and Buried Him With Treasure Chest in New Jersey.

By the Associated Press.

BURLINGTON, N. J., Oct. 9.—Discovery of human bones by volunteer workers who have joined the search for the treasures of gold which legend says were buried more than two centuries ago by the pirate, Blackbeard, on what is now the property here of Miss Florence E. Steward of Trenton, has caused excitement among the residents of the town.

School children uncovered a human skull in a corner of the huge excavation made in the back yard by workmen employed by Miss Steward in the search. Believing that the bones may be those of the Spaniard whom Blackbeard was supposed to have slain and buried above the treasure in the vicinity of the "old pirate tree," scores of other children and young men got out their garden spades and prepared to join the hunt. Miss Steward asked the police to guard her property until she can personally superintend the work of her own diggers.

Legend has it that Edward Teach, a notorious pirate known as Blackbeard, pursued by the galleys of Philip of Spain, had disembarked on the banks of the Delaware with his chest of gold. The ancient black walnut tree under which the treasure was supposed to have been buried long since has decayed. As the story goes, Blackbeard slew one of his followers, that his spirit might guard the gold, and buried his body with the treasure.

The legend is referred to in a statement of "An Historical Collection of the State of New Jersey," published in 1861.

STANDARD STAMPING CO. ASSETS $1,304,000

Receiver Files Inventory in Suit by Stockholder Demanding Accounting.

The assets of the Standard Stamping Co., 2000 North Broadway, are $1,304,000, according to an inventory filed yesterday in Federal Court by Colin M. Selph, who was appointed receiver by Judge Faris in the litigation instituted by James L. Minnis, a stockholder, for an accounting from members of the Wiegand family for alleged mismanagement of the concern's affairs.

Selph, who probably will be removed as receiver, due to the disqualification of Judge Faris to act in the case, reported the receipts of the business from July 21, when he took charge, to be $199,274 and the disbursements $109,046. Four members of the Wiegand family, who were officers and employes of the company prior to the litigation, were discharged by Selph, with a saving in salaries of nearly $20,000 a year. Porter Wiegand filed an affidavit alleging prejudice on the part of Judge Faris, which caused him to remove himself.

RUSSELL SCOTT WRITES BOOK

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Under sentence to be hanged less than a week hence, Russel T. Scott has written his history as an actor, a Canadian financier and finally a man condemned to die for the murder of a Chicago drug clerk. Scott hopes to realize from sales of "In the Shadow of the Rope" funds for a last legal effort to stay the death he has twice escaped by eleventh-hour reprieves.

The third date of execution for Scott, whose brother is under life sentence as an accomplice, is Oct. 15. In July of 1925 he escaped execution by a margin of minutes through a fake telegram which led to the intervention of Gov. Small, and last July a successful sanity hearing plea, preceded the death hour by four hours. Scott later was held sane and a new date set for the hanging.

THIRD DAHLIA SHOW OPENS

The third annual Dahlia Show opened at noon today at Shaw's Garden, with two silver and two bronze medals and many other awards offered in 15 classes for amateur exhibitors and 14 classes for commercial.

The St. Louis Dahlia Show, because of the warm summers, is the latest in the country. Others are held in September. Large and individually perfect blooms arriving early, indicated this show would compare favorably with the two which have been held here.

Canadian Dollar Drops to Par.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—After selling for six months at a premium, sufficiently high at times to attract gold across the border, the Canadian dollar fell back to par yesterday and in scattered exchange transactions was quoted at a slight discount below the American dollar.

WANTS SPECIAL TAX LEVIED TO MEET $7500 JUDGMENT

Holder of Claim Brings Mandamus Suit Against Officials of University City.

Application for a writ of mandamus to compel officials of University City to levy a special tax pay a $7500 judgment obtained against the city in a damage suit, was filed before Circuit Judge McElhinney at Clayton today.

The judgment was obtained by Cleaver Pyle, father of Frank Pyle, a service car driver, who, with a passenger, was killed Feb. 16, 1922, when Pyle's automobile crashed through a guard rail on Ahearn avenue, near Olive Street road, and rolled over an embankment into the River des Peres. The elder Pyle, as administrator of his son's estate, sued University City for damages, alleging negligence in that the guard rail was unpainted and dirty and was not lighted at night, when the accident occurred.

University City, failing to obtain a new trial or to appeal, has not paid the judgment. Under the law, Pyle is not allowed to attach the city hall, fire engine house or other public property. He suggests in his application for mandamus, that University City taxpayers be assessed an additional 50 cents on each $100 until the judgment is paid.

BOMBERS RESUME ACTIVITIES

Three Explosions in Chicago Attributed to Gangsters.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Bombers, inactive here since several paid wreckers were imprisoned some time ago, renewed activities today. Police attribute three explosions to beer gangsters. Two soft drink saloons and a plumbing shop were the objects of the bombs. One man was slightly injured.

The need of funds for the defense of Joe Saltis, charged with murder here, and Frank McErlane, awaiting trial on the same charge in Lake County, Indiana, beer gangster chiefs, or a new beer gang seeking to win customers by force, were alternative suppositions of the police.

AGITATION OVER WASP WAIST

British Physical Culturists Fear Corset Is Coming Back.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—Is the wasp waist coming back? British physical culturists are much agitated about the tendency of fall gowns to have a well-marked waist line.

An announcement that a London woman died after eating a heavy dinner while she was tightly laced has provoked endless warnings through the press that women who want to retain their health must not let themselves become enslaved to the corset.

INDEMNITY BILL IS ADOPTED

Prussian State Council Passes Measure on to Diet.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 9.—The Prussian State Council yesterday adopted the Government's indemnity and settlement compromise bill dealing with the property of the Hohenzollerns, the former ruling family in Germany. The Socialists and Communists voted against the measure, one clause of which is looked on in some quarters as making it possible for the former Emperor to return to the country.

The Prussian State Council is a sort of advisory body which considers measures before they are actually placed before the Diet.

Three American Decrees in Paris.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Oct. 9.—Three divorce decrees today by the Paris courts brought the total of such decrees in which Americans were involved to 11 for the present week. Today's decrees, all on grounds of abandonment, were: Catherine Hart Wynne from Charles John Wynne, married at Philadelphia Sept. 17, 1921; Ada Thompson Lewis Bower from Maurice Lincoln Bower, married at Washington, D. C., March 2, 1918; Wilhelmina Friedlander Arnot from Walter Talmadge Arnot, married at New York in 1915.

Farm Bureaus Approve Tax Plan.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Presidents of 200 farm bureaus, representing every county in Illinois, yesterday pledged their support to the proposed revenue amendment to the State constitution which will be voted upon at the November election. The amendment would give the asembly authority on two-thirds vote to relieve tax burdens on farm lands, homes, etc., by shifting them to income-producing interests.

ADMITS HE FORGED CHECK AND MORPHINE PRESCRIPTION

Dr. Edward L. Mize Arrested With Vial of Tablets When Druggist Gets Suspicious.

Dr. Edward L. Mize, 41 years old, of 3935 Castleman avenue, prisoner at the Magnolia Avenue Police Station, has admitted forging prescription blanks and bogus checks to obtain narcotics for his own use.

He was arrested yesterday on complaint of John Feiler, druggist, at 2337 South Kingshighway, and a bottle of morphine tablets was found on him. He had gone to the store and presented a prescription for quarter-grain morphine tablets and a check for $1.60 in payment, but Feiler became suspicious and learned on investigation that both the physician's prescription and the check of the "patient" were forged.

Dr. Mize was arrested Sept. 1925, for stealing narcotics from a pharmacy at Vandeventer and Finney avenues, to satisfy his cravings. He was committed to an institution and cured, he said, but recently became ill and resumed the habit. He is a practicing physician, but is not registered under the Harrison antinarcotic act and therefore cannot prescribe drugs for himself. He admitted he had been pilfering prescription blanks from other physicians and filling them in.

CIVITAN CLUB HEARS ENGINEER EXPLAIN PLAN FOR SUBWAYS

Service-at-Cost Ordinance Proposed Would Protect City on Project.

The plan of the Special Committee on Subways of the Board of Aldermen was discussed yesterday before the Civitan Club by C. Smith, the committee's engineer, who prepared the report.

Any subways built would be turned over for operation to a successor company of the United Railways under the plan, he said. It has been suggested that the railways might decline to operate them and the city might have a transportation "white elephant" on its hands, as the municipal bridge now is.

Smith declared that this contingency was guarded against by a provision of the service-at-cost ordinance under which it is proposed to refranchise the street railways. This gives the city power to direct how and where the company shall operate. The ordinance referred to by Smith was made public by the Mayor several months ago, but never has been introduced to the Board of Aldermen, and discussion of it has been postponed, chiefly because at the time there was threat of a referendum vote on the Mayor.

As is known, the committee's proposal for rapid transit in St. Louis is five tubes for underground street cars in the downtown district, as the first step; extension of those tubes to the middle of the city, as the second, and their ultimate extension to the city limits as the third. The first step is calculated to save 15 minutes of the present operating time of car lines into the downtown district.

COPENHAGEN DEMONSTRATION AGAINST FINLAND'S PRESIDENT

Students Throw Red Leaflets in Theater Denouncing King's Guest at Opera.

By the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 9.—President Relander of Finland today was inclined to treat humorously the action of young Communists who last night at the Royal Opera House during a gala performance given in honor of his visit to Copenhagen threw red leaflets from a balcony and shouted: "Down with the bloodhound from Helsingfors."

At the time Dr. Relander was sitting in the royal box with King Christian and Queen Alexandrine.

Today Dr. Relander requested King Christian to act with leniency in the cases of six persons arrested, most of them students. The leader of the disturbers is a son of a juridical professor who worked out the details of the Danish constitution. Under the constitution persons libeling or threatening heads of friendly powers may be punished by three months' imprisonment.

One bundle of the red leaflets fell into the lap of Queen Alexandrine. The Queen seemed alarmed, but King Christian and Dr. Relander smiled. The orchestra struck up the Finnish national anthem and drowned out the noise made by spectators in the gallery, crying out rough treatment for the malefactors. The young Communists were taken under custody and the performance proceeded.

"HORNSBY" WINS FIRST RACE ON FAIRMOUNT CARD

Dixieland Handicap Is Feature Event on Program —Fair Weather Helps Attendance.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FAIRMOUNT RACETRACK, Oct. 9.—"Hornsby," two-year-old colt, won the first race here this afternoon, a maiden event. Forebark was second; Little Guinea third.

FAIRMOUNT, Ill., Oct. 9.—Fairmount Park was called on to entertain this afternoon one of the largest crowds that has been at the river-the-river course during the meeting. The visitors included many prominent persons of St. Louis and a goodly number of out-of-town visitors who had journeyed from nearby points. Expecting for heavy clouds blanketed the course racing conditions were ideal. The program featured by the Dixieland Handicap was an appealing one, and brought to the post some of the better stars in the different events.

Jockey Bobby Jones, who cut such a wide swath in the spring meeting here, has been displaced in the first week of the Fairmount fall autumn racing by the newcomers, Emery, Bray and D. Smith.

The former's earnings for the first week totaled $363. Bray followed with an earning of $335. D. Smith also went over the $300 mark when his pay check amounted to $315. The earnings of the other leaders were: R. Jones, $270; D. Froggatte, $234; J. Yates, $204; O. Clelland, $180; J. Zucchini, $171.

BOB O'BOY WINS STAKE AS LEXINGTON CLOSES

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 9.—Lexington's fourth annual Grand Circuit meeting came to a close yesterday afternoon with the winning of the Optimist Stake for 3-year-old trotters by Bob O'Boy, and the Phoenix Hotel for 2:05 pacers by Dan as joint features.

J. T. Morrison of Sandusky, O., on the preceding day, carried off the driving honors by winning the Phoenix with Attco and the pace with Princess Iroquois. Bob 2:07 went to The Senator, by the Palin stable. The handsome chestnut stallion, always a great favorite, had little difficulty in winning in 2:06½ and 2:05.

Guy Trogan, Transylvania winner, beat his record of 2:04¼ when he trotted it in 2:03, though conditions were not entirely suitable for record breaking. His mile the first of the season for a trotting horse.

DUKE OF YORK HANDICAP CAPTURED BY WINALOT

By the Associated Press.

BRIGHTON PARK, England, Oct. 9.—J. Shepherd's Winalot, by Son-in-Law out of Gallenza, won the Duke of York Handicap, run here today.

Winalot, at odds of 9 to 2 against, finished one and a half lengths ahead of Mrs. J. Bancroft's Purple Shade, while the American, A. K. Number's. The Sirdar was two lengths further back. The betting against Purple Shade was 100 to 9 and against The Sirdar 100 to 6. The race, at 1¼ miles, was worth $5,000. Thirteen ran.

SPRINGFIELD TEACHERS BEAT CAPE NORMAL

By the Associated Press.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Oct. 9.—Three well-placed field goals by Chuck Austin gave the Springfield Teachers' College eleven a 6-0 victory over Cape Girradeau Normal here yesterday. Springfield was the bigger team and the locals never got within 25 yards of the visitors' goal line.

Wins Today His Second Victory

GROVER CLEVELAND ALEXANDER.

BILLIKEN FROSH BEAT BARRACKS ELEVEN, 27-2

Coach Mathews' St. Louis U. freshmen showed convincing power yesterday in their first game by beating the army post eleven from Jefferson Barracks, 27 to 2, at St. Louis U. Field. The Billiken yearlings uncorked a passing attack that had the soldiers puzzled and in the second half devoted most of their time to rushing.

Cornell scored in the third quarter on a nice 25-yard run. Lintenich, former Webster Groves player, starred at quarterback. Daubner and Drury looked good on the ends and the line functioned well throughout.

PANTS TEAM LEAVES FOR CINCINNATI

Sixteen members of the Pants team, St. Louis municipal baseball champions, left last night for Cincinnati for two return games with the Fenwicks, Cincinnati title holders, today and tomorrow. They were accompanied by Reuben Tapperson, superintendent of recreation, and Karl Kamp, local sports official. Two games played here last week were split between the two clubs.

ALEXANDER PITCHES IN FORM; BELL KNOCKS A HOME RUN

Hornsby's Men Find Shawkey Early—Chill Holds Attendance at Yankee Stadium to About 55,000.

By J. Roy Stockton
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The Cardinals tied the world series at three games each by defeating the New York Yankees here this afternoon in their sixth meeting. The National and American League champions, respectively, will play here again tomorrow for the title.

The score was 10 to 2.

Grover Alexander, who gained the Cardinals' first victory in the series, was in the box again today. Bob Shawkey, for the Yankees, was pounded for three runs in the opening inning, when Holm singled, Bottomley doubled and ester Bell singl l.

Shawkey was batted out in the seventh inning, Urban Shocker taking his place.

The sun was shini. , but there was an October chill in the air, and many seats in the great Yankee Stadium were vacant, although some 55,000 were in attendance.

Taylor Douthit still was sore and stiff, but was able to bat in practice, but Wattie Holm again played center field.

The photographers appeared to be bored with the series by this time and there was none of the hustle and excitement that characterized their efforts to snap everybody and everything at previous games.

The motion picture men became busy when the pitchers began to warm up and filmed Alexander and Shawkey.

Holm Starts With Single.

Shawkey had pitched three and two-thirds innings as a relief pitcher in previous games of the series without a Cardinal reaching base, but Holm, leading off today, lined a single to right. The stands cheered.

The Cardinals were the underdog and New York, a good city, usually is with the under-dog.

Southworth fouled off several and then grounded to Koenig, who tossed to Lazzeri, forcing Holm. Faster work would have produced a double play, but Southworth easily beat Lazzeri's relay to Gehrig.

Hornsby took a ball, fouled a strike, took another ball, called strike, third ball, which Shawkey thought was a strike, and then a fourth ball, on the outside corner of the plate, but too low, and Hornsby walked. The fans thought it should have been a strike and roared their disapproval. That's the way the fans are. They'd like to see Hornsby and his colorful Cardinals win, but they don't want any of Hornsby's strikes called balls.

Bottomley made good in this early pinch.

Bottomley and Bell Hit.

He clocked a low liner down the left field line. The ball hit just inside the chalk mark, just out of Dugan's reach, and bounced against the wall of the boxes and went for two bases, Southworth scoring and Hornsby reaching third.

Bell also delivered in the pinch. He fouled off two and then lined a single to left and Hornsby and Bottomley chased over the plate. Ruth might have had a chance to throw to the plate, but he fumbled momentarily and then sailed the ball toward first base in the hope that Bell would overrun the bag. But Lester played it wisely and held the base.

There was a conference at the mound as to whether Shawkey ought to be taken out, but it was decided to permit him to remain and he showed the wisdom of the decision by striking out Hafey and O'Farrell.

Alex Starts Well.

Alexander started his pitching performance by buzzing a fast one over the inside corner and Combs protested when O'Day called it a strike. The next one was a strike and Combs swung at the third one, sending a liner past Alexander. Alexander slowed it up and Thevenow turned a fast play in grabbing the ball and throwing to Bottomley for a putout.

Koenig was even an easier victim. He swung viciously and was Old Pete's first strikeout victim.

There was a great cheer of expectation when Ruth went to the plate and when Alexander pitched three balls to him, the cheer changed to boos of disapproval. The spectators wanted to see the Bambino swing. Alexander was not trying to walk him. He gave him a called strike inside, another strike which Ruth missed and a third strike which Ruth hit straight to Bottomley for an easy putout.

Including the last two batters in last Sunday's game, this gave Alexander a record of retiring 24 Yankees in succession.

Meusel Gets Fluke Double.

Thevenow flied to Combs to start the second inning. Shawkey appeared to have struck his stride and Alexander flied to Meusel and Holm popped a foul to Severeid.

Meusel led off in this inning with a pop fly to left field. Thevenow misjudged it and overran the ball and then could not reach it in time for a catch and the ball fell safe for a fluke double. Fluke doubles have certainly played a prominent part in the Yanks' attack in this series. Thevenow then grabbed Gehrig's grounder and threw him out after bluffing Meusel back to second. Tommy atoned for his blunder then. He raced over behind second and made a brilliant stop of Lazzeri's grounder and his rifle throw to Bottomley retired the runner. Meusel went to third on the play, but Dugan grounded to Bell.

Third Inning Uneventful.

Shawkey again was master of the Cardinals in the third inning. Combs gave the fans a thrill when he juggled Southworth's line drive but he finally held it. Hornsby grounded to Koenig and Bottomley popped politely to Gehrig.

Alex Gets Out of a Hole.

Severeid lined to center to start the Yanks' third and then with a chance for a double lay, Thevenow missed Shawke s easy grounder and both runners were safe. The situation was threatening, if any situation ever was. Two on the sacks, nobody out, the top end of the Yankee batting order coming up.

But Alex cares not for "murderer's row." He took Coombs' easy grounder and tossed to Bell, forcing Severeid. Koenig flied to Southworth, but still there was Babe Ruth to be reckoned with. Would Alex pitch to him? There was another great roar of expectation all ready to turn into boos of disapproval if there was any attempt to wall. Ruth. But Alex did not walk him. He was just another bat to Old Pete and that's the way he pitched to the Babe. A called strike and then another in the strike zone and Ruth sent a nice little grounder to Bottomley and another dangerous spot had been passed.

Meusel Triples and Scores.

Bell drew a pass to open the fourth inning and Hafey sacrificed him to second, but with O'Farrell at the bat. Bell tried to steal third and was out, Severeid to Dugan. The margin by which Bell was caught and the way he was running indicated that signals had gone wrong and he thought the hit-and-run play had been ordered. O'Farrell then ended the half inning with a fly to Meusel.

Meusel, leading off for the Yanks in the fourth, cut a vicious liner down the left field line and when the ball hit the field boxes and bounded away from Hafey, the drive was good for three bases, the first triple of the series. Gehrig shot a hot grounder to Hornsby, but with a three-run lead the infield was playing back and Meusel scored while Rogers was throwing out Gehrig.

This was the first run of the series off Alexander, who had previously pitched 12 scoreless innings.

Thevenow threw out Lazzeri for the second out, and then Dugan lined a solid single to center, but Old Pete struck out Severeid on three pitched balls to end the fracas. Severeid clipped a vicious foul down the left field line on a second strike.

Holm Bats in Run.

Wattie Holm, the substitute, the man who was thrown into the battlefront at the last minute because Douhit's arm was too sore to risk playing him in center field, drove in the Cardinals' fourth run in the fifth inning. Thevenow opened the frame with a single to left, a line drive between Dugan and Koenig, and Alexander sacrificed him to second. Holm then punched a single over second and Thevenow scored.

Holm advanced on Southworth's grounder to Dugan, but Lazzeri made a fine stop to retire Hornsby.

Alexander turned the Yanks back in one-two-three order in their half. Shawkey struck out, Combs flied to Hafey and Holm ran in for Koenig's short fly.

Bottomley's Second Double.

Bottomley contributed his second double of the day in the opening blow in the sixth inning, a tremendous blow, a line drive over Ruth's head. Bell tried to bunt and then after fouling far into the left field bleachers, just out of fair territory, he struck out on a ball low on the outside.

Shawkey struck out Hafey and O'Farrell, after working the call to three balls and two strikes, fouled to Dugan and Bottomley's double was wasted.

WASHINGTON MEETS ROLLA; ST. LOUIS U. BATTLES DRURY TODA

Mahan Missing From Bear Lineup; Billikens Try New Combination:

Kurz, a Guard, Will Also Miss Pikeway Game; Mathews Tries Denver and Kennedy at Fullback, and Feld and Dirnberger at Half.

Washington University plays Rolla (Missouri School of Mines) at Francis Field, and St. Louis University meets Drury College at Sportsman's Park this afternoon in the second week of play for the local elevens. The Washington game will start at 2:30 and the St. Louis U. contest at 2:15 o'clock.

Capt. Mahan will be missing from the Pikeway backfield in today's game, due to an injury suffered in scrimmage, and Kurz, a regular guard, will be out of uniform because of illness. McDonough will replace Mahan at half. Senne will be the other half, Hayes the quarter and Whittler will play fullback.

Billikens at Full Strength.

Handicapped by the changes necessitated by the absence of Mahan and Kurz, Washington will have its hands full taking the measure of the hard-plunging Miner team. Lee and Lemon, two fast and veteran ball carriers, will make plenty of trouble for Coach Higgins' men.

Coach Mathews has also shifted his St. Louis U. lineup but not because of injuries. The Billikens have been moving along steadily since last Saturday perfecting a few new plays and scrimmaging a bit each day, but have kept the injuries down to a minimum. Mathew's reason for changing the men around is to test out the strength of his crew of sophomores in various positions.

Denvir and Kennedy, who alternated at one of the halves last Saturday, will play fullback today and Feld and Dirnberger, who were at fullback in the opening contest, will be utilized at one of the halves. Kearns will hold down the other half, with a new man, Hanadri, ready to substitute for him. On the basis of their showing last week, the Billikens are favored to defeat Drury.

The probable starting lineups are as follows:

Washington.	Pos.	Rolla.
McCarroll	L. E.	Alleback
Collins	L. T.	Bolen
Hannibal	L. G.	Lacy
Elliott	C.	Young
Libman	R. T.	Johnson

McDonald	R. E.	Hodgon
Hayes	Q. B.	Thomas
Senne	L. H. B.	Lemon
McDonough	R. H. B.	Cavanaugh
Whittler	F. B.	Lee

Place—Francis Field. Time—2:30 o'clock.

St. Louis U.	Pos.	Drury.
Kahle	L. E.	Neitzert
Crecilius	L. T.	Davidson
Downey	L. G.	Smith
Stampfli	C.	Moseley
Vassolo	R. G.	Bean

Denvir or Kennedy	F. B.	D. La Porte or Livingston

Place—Sportsman's Park. Time—2:15 o'clock.

Oregon Elevens Built Up With Imported Talent

Aggies' Gridiron Squad Strengthened by Men From Other Sections.

By LAWRENCE PERRY.
(Copyright 1926.)

CORVALLIS, Ore., Oct. 9.—Football in Oregon is in an interesting state of development only in recent years has the game taken hold of the public as a really popular sport.

Now it is getting ready to burst into full flower. The erection of the big Multnomah Stadium in Portland is one of the signs of growing gridiron impulse. The improvement in the various college elevens is another. As compared to most states, Oregon has scanty material for teams. There are more people in the city of Los Angeles, if estimates of the population in the Southern California city are not grossly exaggerated, than there are in this whole State.

On the other hand, where numbers are lacking, size is ever present. The Oregon Agricultural College, situated in this town, has the heaviest line in the Pacific Coast Conference, and as a whole will probably outweigh any other eleven. And in a region where young men grow so big this is saying a great deal.

Above other institutions in the State, the Aggies are favored with outside material. There are players from Southern California and even from the Middle West on the team. This is rather a new angle to college sport in this State, and new developments may include a general reaching-out for new material. Or Oregon, with a slogan of "Oregon players for Oregon teams," may arise and eventually develop into a war cry.

Star Plays Change Allegiance.

In truth, this is an issue one encounters frequently in the West. At Colorado University they were mourning the loss to Alabama of a flashy backfield man who was expected to matriculate at Boulder and at Nebraska U. football enthusiasts were casting envious thoughts toward a West coast institution whither a valuable Cornhusker prospect had gone to study.

One thing, though, is certain: Oregon never will have to import men of bulk and brawn. Dickerson, of the Aggies who stands 6 feet 6 and weighs 220 pounds, is a native son, and so is Roscoe Luce, another lineman who is 6 feet 4 and tips the beam at 210. The rest of the forwards are so big that this paid does not stand out particularly when the linemen assemble.

Every one at Corvallis figures that this season will give the Aggies their big chance to capture the Pacific Coast championship. If the play of the team should match its formidable appearance there would be little doubt as to where the title would rest at the close of the season. However, great weight and playing ability do not always go together.

Patrolman Harry Griffith Dies.

Patrolman Harry M. Griffith, 38 years old, attached to the Newstead Avenue District, died suddenly at his home, 4215 Swan avenue, yesterday of acute bronchitis. Griffith had suffered from throat trouble for four years and last Wednesday obtained a sick leave. He is survived by his widow and two small children. Griffith joined the department in 1913.

Midwest's Eyes On 2 Big Games

Notre Dame Battling Minnesota While Missouri Clashes With Nebraska Today.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—Two games of conference significance and as many intersectional contests were outstanding in today's midwestern football.

Maryland was at Chicago for the second intersectional clash of the year for the Maroons, conquerors of Florida last week, and the Marines came up from Quantico to play St. Xavier at Cincinnati.

The conference game was at Lincoln, where Missouri, starting a drive for third successive Missouri Valley championship, opposed Nebraska, last fall's runner-up.

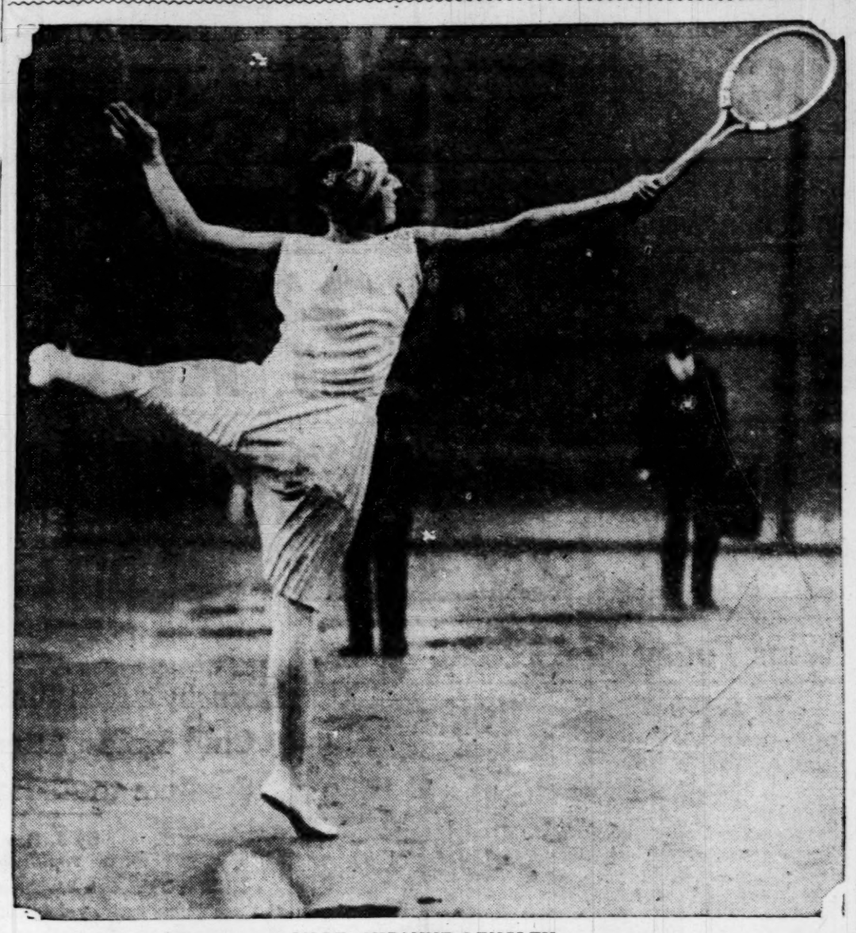

Virtually a western conference game was provided, however, by Notre Dame's invasion of Minnesota. Rockne's school is not in the big ten but the contest was looked to as an indication of 1926 fortunes of big ten teams, the Hoosiers being a consistent annual stumbling block for the conference varsities which start championship plays next week.

The engagement was the feature of the day.

Of the other big teams, Wisconsin was host to Kansas, Michigan was opposed by Michigan State College, Northwestern met Carleton College, Illinois entertained Butler, Iowa met North Dakota, Purdue was at home to Wabash, Ohio opposed Ohio Wesleyan at Columbus and Indiana's field was invaded by Kentucky.

Missouri Valley varsities other than Missouri and Nebraska had opponents in various midwestern teams outside the conference, Drake being the only valley team in distant fields. The Des Moines varsity was on the Atlantic seaboard, engaging Navy.

Tigers Outweigh Cornhusker Line In Battle Today

Rivals of 30 Years' Standing Match Skill on Nebraska Gridiron.

By the Associated Press.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 9.—Rivals in a gridiron warfare of more than 30 years' standing were matched today in the annual University of Missouri and University of Nebraska skirmish here.

Smarting under the defeat of the Tigers last year, the Cornhuskers who have an overwhelming margin of victories in the line of games, were anxious for revenge from the Missouri Valley champions of 1925 and the previous year.

The Huskers had a considerable weight handicap as the Missouri line averages close to the 200-pound mark, this total including a center, who weighs only 160 pounds. Nebraska forwards average about 190 pounds.

In matching possible speed against brawn, Coach Bearge of Nebraska and his assistants have groomed two complete teams with a third set of backs to hurl into the fray. Coach Henry of Missouri also has ample reserves.

Attendance records for a Missouri Valley game were expected to be broken at today's game, and it was thought probable that only the throng which saw the Cornhuskers-Notre Dame game last November, would surpass the crowd in midwestern annals.

The probable lineup:

Nebraska.	Position.	Missouri.
Sprague	L. E.	Bacchus (C)
Stiner (C)	L. T.	Lucas

Most Expensive Grid Game to Be Army-Navy Tilt

Expenses to Be Between $450,000 and $500,000; Tickets to Cost $10.

(Copyright 1926.)

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—The world's most expensive football game, now in the offing, seems to be a neglected part of the season's sporting events.

There will probably be nothing quite like it again in the way of gridiron contests. A colorful spectacle it is quite sure to rank foremost among football happenings. Yet this year's Army-Navy battle gets attention only from hopeful ticket holders.

The strangest part of the whole episode is that fact that those back of it do not need to be concerned about possible profits. Their concern is involved in raising between $450,000 to $500,000 with which to pay the expenses of the contest.

Chicago Carries Burden.

Never before has a football game cost like that. But then, never before has the mid-west wanted to see the West Point and Annapolis teams perform badly enough to pay half a million dollars. This year it is in for a treat.

When Chicago tackled the job of bringing the two service teams to this city for their annual gridiron classic, it also tacked the job of transporting 4000 cadets and midshipmen from the eastern edge of the country, 1000 miles inland to this metropolis. Besides transportation costs, the city must pay the living costs of the 5000 youths on their four or five day holiday.

Financial Success Assured.

The game itself is somewhat lost track of in the calculations of possible riots and disbursements. Still a financial success is nearly assured by the payment of $125,000 for a few hundred boxes, which went at an average of $38.80 a seat. The general run of spectators who are fortunate enough to get tickets probably will pay $10. But there are only 40,000 seats for the public and the demand is for several times that many.

But one experience is expected to be enough. Annual jaunts are scarcely to be considered in store for the young military and naval students. The problems of ticket distribution, wrangling over seats, and costs are almost too much of an item to pay for one glimpse of gay uniforms and one view of a football game.

As Barbatano was within 100 yards of his home, four shots were fired, two of them piercing his head. A woman's footprints were found behind the brush from which the shots had been fired.

Fast Track and Speedy Dogs May Set New Records

Tarrasfoot, Actor Boy, Marshall's Ribbon and Suir Side in Race Tonight.

There is every indication of a track record going to smash when the box is sprung in the fourth race, over the quarter mile distance on tonight's card at the Madison Kennel Club. Due to the absence of rain of late the running track has become very fast and with such fleet racers as Tarrasfoot, Suir Side, Marshalls Ribbon and Actor Boy entered in the feature event the falling of a track mark is not at all unlikely.

Suir Side and Tarrasfoot will renew their speed feud in the race. The final Futurity match race between these two stars resulted in a victory for the former, but if the track continues to be dry tonight, Tarrasfoot bay reverse the decision. Tarrasfoot is the holder of the world's mark for the Futurity route having covered the distance at Newark, N. J., in 28 1-5 seconds.

Marshalls Ribbons' last race in which he equalled Suir Side's track mark of :28 4-5 will also command consideration. In winning that race Marshalls Ribbon covered the quarter mile in 25 3-5 seconds. Actor Boy was only a short distance behind Marshall all the way and for that reason may be figured a contender.

Monclair, the hurdling ace of the "Spot" David kennel, is another entry on tonight's card which may bring down a track mark. Monclair didn't like the going the last time out and fell, losing the decision to Tiger Bill. In his initial start here he established a new track record for the quarter mile jumping distance, winning in 27 4-5 seconds. Either Cimaroon Pat or Tiger Bill will win if Monclair doesn't fall again and that is unlikely.

White Pop, Proud Mike and Acting Buddy may have it out between them for the five sixteenths purse. Pop is the logical choice. Dora Ridge, Bonnie Pass, Wang Wang Blues, On The Turf and Little John are the probable winners of the other races.

Professional Football Fails To Get Toe Hold in Far We

By Lawrence Perry.
(Copyright, 1926.)

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 9.—Casting a backward glance toward the Far West, the writer finds one memory standing out beyond most others. That is the little interest that is being taken out there in professional football. It is virtually non-existent.

For a time there was a certain mild interest in the fortunes of George Wilson's band of gridiron mercenaries, but as reports of misfortunes of the outfit came to the Coast, it began to disappear.

There now are no professional elevens on the Coast and the college game reigns absolutely. The only real look the Pacific slope had at professional football was when Red Grange's Chicago Bears, and an eleven locally organized, played up and down the Coast. There was no remarkable outpouring of spectators, save at Los Angeles, and even there they were not impressed.

Perhaps a reason for lack of interest in the professional game is that the public has no great difficulty in securing tickets for college games. This is true, at least, in the Northwest, while in the Golden State there are many colleges playing the game in addition to Southern California, Stanford and the University of California. When two of these three clash tickets are to be secured only at a premium, but with other games this is not the case.

It is not likely that any Saturday in any previous football season ever held so many important and colorful struggles as are set for October.

New York will establish a record by staging two important intercollegiate struggles on that day, Columbia against Ohio State and Tulane against New York University. The Oregon Aggies will play California at Berkeley, a rousing game. Denver gets her first real test meeting the Colorado Aggies, champions of the Rocky Mountain Conference last year. West Virginia and Georgetown will provide Washington with a real thrill.

Georgia Tech and Alabama come to grips at Atlanta. Pennsylvania will receive Chicago at Franklin Field in an important intersectional struggle. Yale and Dartmouth will fight it out in the Yale bowl and Princeton and Navy will engage at Princeton. Syracuse against the West Point cadets, Notre Dame against Penn State, Michigan and Minnesota and Illinois and Iowa round out the list of contests that are of national interest.

KIRKWOOD ELEVEN HAS GOOD CHANCE TO TAKE COUNTY CHAMPIONSHIP

Coach Lyon has put upon the field this season one of the strongest football elevens that ever represented Kirkwood High School. The strength of the Red and White machine does not lie altogether with the letter men, but is largely due to the bevy of heavy candidates who, though green, have shown their ability to stand the gaff. The ability displayed in preseason games with Belleville, Ill., and Flat River, Mo., have marked Coach Lyon's charges as one of the leading contenders in the County League race.

Coach Lyon, ably assisted by Coach McMahon, has carefully "prepped" the warriors for today's contest with the heavy De Soto, Mo., aggregation, to be played at Kirkwood.

The outstanding feature of the fast Red and White attack is the long passes tossed by "Bob" Sample, elusive quarterback, who also has shown great ability to run with the ball.

CROWD OF 55,000, SMALLEST AT YANKEE STADIUM, SEES 6TH SERIES GAME

Manager Hornsby Is Given Certificate as Member Of Ruth's All-Star Team

Fans Applaud Ruth in Practice — Shawkey's Record for Retiring Every Cardinal That Faced Him Broken When Holm, First Up in Today's Game Singles.

By Herman Wecke,
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

YANKEE STADIUM, NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—The crowd was the smallest of any of the three games at Yankee Stadium. There were vacant spaces in the bleachers as well as in the unreserved sections of the grandstand. It appeared as though the attendance would be around the 55,000 mark.

Half an hour before game time not more than one-fourth of the reserved seats were filled. There also were vacant spaces in the bleachers and unreserved sections at this time. It was the coolest day of the series and top coats were very much in evidence.

Hornsby Receives Certificate.

Before the game, Rogers Hornsby, Cardinal manager, was photographed with his certificate, signifying that he had been named on Babe Ruth's All-American team for 1926. Hornsby is the only man who has been selected on the team each year that the Bambino has had an all-star club. Hornsby was the only Cardinal named in 1926, although now the Babe admits that Bob O'Farrell is the best catchers in the majors. On his team, Ruth placed Bubbles Hargrave of the Reds.

Applause Greets Ruth.

Babe Ruth was given a great reception when Yankee fielding practice began and the Bambino trotted out to right field. This was the first burst of applause. Hitherto the crowd was quiet and orderly just like a crowd at an ordinary Saturday afternoon ball game and after giving Ruth his reception the stands again became quiet.

Shawkey's "Streak" Barren.

When Shawkey faced Holm in the first, he had a record of having retired 11 straight batters as relief pitcher. But his streak was broken when the Cardinal left-center fielder singled with a 2-2 call. It was a line smash to right. Jim Bottomley's double in the first gave him a record of having swatted safely in each game. He is the only Cardinal to perform a like feat. Bob Shawkey got in trouble with the umpires early. He was using entirely too much spit for a non-spit ball pitcher.

Wind Helps Meusel's Hit.

Meusel's wind-blown double in the second gave him the honor of being the first man to reach base against Alexander, after "Old Pete" had retired 24 seccessive hitters.

Tommy Thevenow brought down the house in this round when he went behind second to grab Lazzeri's roller and got his man at first with a perfect throw, made while off balance.

Alexander Checks Rally.

It was master pitcher against master slugger, with two men on the paths in the third when Ruth came up and the master pitcher, Alexander, won. The first one was a called strike and on the next the Babe rolled weakly to Bottomley, to end the side and pull Alexander out of a tight position.

Bob Meusel made the first three-base hit of the series. It was a tremendous smash down the third base line to start the Yankee fourth.

Alexander's Control Remarkable.

The wonderful control of Alexander is evinced in the fact that in the first four innings he threw only 10 called balls, an average of 2½ a frame.

RUMANIAN BANDITS DISPERSED

Bessarabian Police End Reign of Terror in Villages.

By the Associated Press.

CZERNOVITH, Rumania, Oct. 9.—An organization of bandits, headed by an army officer, a policeman, a notary and a burgomaster, characterized by the populace as "a respectable band" has been dispersed by the Bessarabian police.

The brigands spread terror in the regions in which they operated. Scores of murders and other crimes were laid at their doors. An instance of the success of their operations is cited in the case of the little village of Caracuseni. Two years ago the band, 50 strong, invaded the village, fought with the inhabitants for several hours, overcame them and rode away with everything movable in the town in their possession.

S. DAKOTA HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS PLAY FOOTBALL

CAVOUR, S. D., Oct. 9.—Women's football has gained a definite place in Cavour High School despite blackened eyes, scratched faces and considerable bruisings.

Thirty girls took part recently in a regulation football game between the Alpha and Beta girls of the school.

The game was spirited. Fierce line plunging, rapid dashes around end and crashing tackles marked the play. Marjorie Gilchrist proved a vicious tackler and several of her football playing sisters suffered.

Saturday home remedies, arnica for the bruises, and beefsteak for the darkened eyes—are in vogue.

Jansen Beaten by Shade.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 9. — Another French boxer—Raymond Jansen—made his first stab against Bert McCarthy of Melbourne in a 20-round bout at the Melbourne Stadium, but lost a close decision. McCarthy was the cleverer of the two and never gave the Frenchman a chance to get the lead.

Two U. S. Negroes Score.

MELBOURNE, Oct. 9.—Two American Negroes are making quite a hit in Australia at the present time—"Tiger" Payne and "Sunny" Jim Williams. Payne has won a number of good matches and Williams has beaten practically everyone sent against him.

Berlenbach and Delaney Putting On Avoirdupois

Both Apparently Want to Be Heavies and Take Shot at Tunney.

By Sparrow McGann.

(Copyright, 1926.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—At the rate the ex-heavyweight champion Jack Delaney is puttin gon weight, it looks as if he will have to abandon the lighter class and join the mad scramble of contenders for Gene Tunney's title. Jack has been taking things easy waiting for the bump he broke on Paul Berlenbach's solid jaw to heal up. Word now comes from his camp that he has put on 20 pounds—and not all fat.

Pete Reilly, who manages the Bridgeport Adonis, is jubilant. He has sto match his man with the Germanly heavyweight titleholder, and has been put off from time to time, that Gene is too heavy for Delaney.

Now all is changed and Pete is sure his bea tto interest Tex Rickard in bringing the pair together. It will be quite a task. It is well known that Rickard is not over eager to put anything. Pete's boy since the latter broke away from Rickard's direction and went with Humbert Fugazy. This is the titular match between the champion Berlenbach and Delaney has to Brooklyn and Tex lost a big chance of putting a few dollars on the credit side of the ledger.

Good Match for Tunney.

It is true that Delaney has put on fighting weight it means that a real contender for Tunney's title will come to the fore. Delaney and Berlenbach would make an ideal match. It is safe to say that those who make a practice of betting their money on chances of a fighter coming would have a hard job of it to make up their minds which to back.

Now that Jack Sharkey succeeds in beating Harry Wills there is no man in the fistic horizon capable of troubling Tunney. This despite the efforts of Tex Rickard to hold heavyweight tourneys throughout the winter to bring out a formidable opponent for the champion from the list of young heavyweights. There probably will not be a return Dempsey bout for a long time, if ever.

There is a likelihood of Delaney's plans going astray before he gets the coveted crack at Gene's title. Word comes from the Coast that Paul Berlenbach has put on weight and is to blossom forth as a full-fledged heavy.

Berlenbach will be within his rights in asking Jack to meet him for the right to battle Tunney. Willingly consented to give Delaney two chances at the title. Although the latter scored the only knockout checked against Jack's record.

Duncan to Head List of British Pro Golf Stars

Will Invade U. S. This Winter Playing in South and West.

By Ray McCarthy,

(Copyright, 1926.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—George Duncan, Archie Compston and possibly Audrey Boomer, three of the most famous professional golfers in Great Britain, will invade the United States some time this winter. This exclusive news may not startle anybody. Some probably will be so unkind as to inquire "what of it?"

Nevertheless, the visit of this trio of skilled linksmen presages activity on Southern and Western courses this winter which will be unusual to say the least. Hark to the plans of the foreigners.

Duncan, the peer, is coming to America primarily and principally to participate in the California and Florida tournaments but he will lecture as well. Duncan will do it as a comparatively new wrinkle in golf although the writer recalls a number of practical demonstrations of golf shots throughout the country given in collaboration by Gene Sarazen and Jock Hutchison four year ago.

Duncan's lecturing will be done mainly in various department stores in the Far West and South, although he also will do plenty of demonstrating on the links. Those who hear Duncan discuss golf will get some excellent pointers. The former British open champion is one of the keenest students of the game. It has been said of Duncan that he has forgotten more about golf than the average professional will ever learn.

Wants to Play Hagen.

Some time during his visit here in January, February and March, Duncan hopes to meet Walter Hagen in a match of 72 holes for a substantial side purse. Tme Briton, in fact, already has issued this charge to Hagen and is coming to the States with backing of a number of prominent Britons. The latter are confident Duncan can beat Hagen because he has done so twice already.

Little has been heard regarding the Manchester giant, Compston, in the past four months, and for good reason. Last winter, after a brilliant year of golf in his home country in which he cleaned up all opposition, Compston came to the states with the intention of doing a little mopping up here also. He did manage to win a couple of tournaments in Florida, but on the whole his showing was something disappointing, both to himself and his admirers.

Without any ado he boarded a boat to his homeland last spring with the firm resolution he would not return until he has thoroughly and completely regained mastery of the game that has broken up so many homes. A foreign informant now brings the Compston July 1st had been practicing diligently an average of four to five hours each day.

"He has been doing nothing but practicing," said one authority returning from the other side. He chalks out squares on the fairway 150 yards distance from where he is shooting and endeavors to shoot 125 golf balls between these lines."

Boomer is one of the most popular professionals in Europe. He also is a great golfer. He has been handicapped by having been gassed in the war and he is not as strong as he might be. According to all reports, Boomer is certain to captivate the hearts of all Americans.

18,341,400 Lines of Paid Advertising

A Record of 9 Big Months

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch carried more paid advertising during the first nine months of 1926 than during any previous similar period.

The gain over the first nine months of last year was 1,576,400 lines—more than double the gain of all other St. Louis newspapers combined.

The Post-Dispatch is the only St. Louis newspaper to make consecutive gains every month both in local display and in total paid advertising.

The Post-Dispatch has carried more local display advertising since January 1 than the Globe-Democrat, the Star and the Times added together.

The gain of the Post-Dispatch in local display advertising since January 1 was 682,920 lines. The Globe-Democrat's loss was 149,100 lines. The Star's loss was 109,500 lines.

Mazer and Lang May Meet Again

Encounter Expected to Be Part of South Broadway Program Thursday.

Efforts are being made by officials of the South Broadway A. C. to schedule a return battle between Micky Mazer and Ray Lang, local flyweight boxers, who fought a strenuous and evenly contested bout at the Garrick Theater last Wednesday night. The proposed encounter will be held as one of the special events of next Thursday night's amateur fistic tourney at the South Side in the event the fighters are signed. Lang, who represents the Tower A. C., shaded Mazer in their recent setto. Mazer is a member of the Sherman Park boxing team.

Morrie Greenberg, National A. A featherweight star, who defeated Eddie Burke shortly after Burke won the Western A. A. U. title last spring, will also appear in one of the special events of the South Broadway tourney. Matchmaker Miller is endeavoring to sign up Frank Sims of the Business Men's A. C., to oppose Greenberg. Sims was a semifinalist in the last district tourney, losing a close decision to Nick Charwick, who thus qualified to meet Burke in the titular final.

Officials of the South Side club are also seeking a heavyweight opponent for John Schwake, the Webster Groves mauler, who has filed his entry for one of the interclub specials.

The open events to be staged as preliminaries of Thursday night's show have attracted a total of 37 entries to date.

German Champ, Floored in First, Outpoints Hansen

Teutonic Cave Man Shows Courage and Finishes Strong After Poor Start.

By Hype Igoe,
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Franz Diener, a German brand of "cave man," outslugged gangling Knute Hansen in the final heavyweight bout in Madison Square Garden last night, getting the decision at the end of 10 rounds.

This bout was the wind-up of a flock of heavyweight frolics that had the big show house ringing with approval one minute and booing the next.

All told, the first show of the heavyweights was a howling success. Diener beat Hansen because he was able to come on after getting a stiff poking for five rounds. With that many rounds chalked against him Franz got going and he took all the other periods when Knute failed to hold up his head.

Diener nearly died in the first. He was floored beautifully with a clean right to the jaw; but to the astonishment of the patrons he bobbed up as if nothing had disturbed his even keel. He fought like a mad man once he was up and Knute had to step lively to get by. Then Hansen settled down to a methodical demonstration of what Joe Woodman and George Lawrence had taught him in the way of fisticuffs.

Knute got along handsomely until the sixth round. In this session Diener cut loose with the ferocity of a tiger and from then on it was rough seas, for even a sailor like Knute.

De Mave Beats Fitzsimmons.

The first 10-round affair brought out Jack De Mave and Bob Fitzsimmons. Bob has got older looking and somewhat fatter. His mauling style had De Mave worried but just the same Jack gave Robert a shellacking. It was a rough-house affair from the start. In the main De Mave took the play away from Fitz. He did this for 10 rounds and easily earned the decision.

Jimmy Delaney met Alex Rely, a most amazingly developed Negro from Peru. He wasn't a bad boxer either. In the third round he had Delaney on the edge of a K. O. James had grown a bit careless and suddenly the Negro hooked one from the floor and James was bobbing along the rocky lane. By great generalship he came through. The end came in the eighth when the referee, Arthur Donovan, decided that Rely had enough and gave it to Delaney.

Boxer Loses His Adam's Apple.

The first bout ended in a strangle in the third round when Tod Wickman, fighting his first fight, was counted out after swallowing his Adam's apple. In wrestling on the ropes with his opponent, Henry Le Mar, the former amateur champion, Wickman fell through them and in falling landed on his throat across the lower rope. His Adam's apple was displaced, the doctors said afterwards, but whatever it was Wickman was in dreadful straits for breath as he squirmed on the floor.

St. Louis Soccer Team Meets Detroit Eleven Tomorrow

Game at Sportsman's Park to Test Strength of Picked Team Which Will Oppose Sparta, of Czecho-Slovakia on October 17.

By Dent McSkimming.

In picking out a team upon which to test the merit of the all-star eleven which will oppose Sparta of Prague on Oct. 17, St. Louis Soccer League officials have picked no "soft spot." The "trial horse" n this case is the Solvay Club of Detroit, one of the strongest teams ever assembled in the Detroit district.

Many local soccer fans will recall the All-Scot team of Detroit which gave a very attractive display of football here last spring. The Solvay team beat All-Scots three weeks ago, 3 to 0. That is a convincing score in professional soccer circles and is taken as an indication that Solvay is strong enough to bring out the very best that's in the St. Louis stars.

Play at Sportsman's Park.

The game tomorrow at Sportsman's Park will serve to open the local soccer season and to provide valuable practice for the selected All-St. Louis eleven which must needs be at the top of its game to beat Sparta on the following Sunday, Oct. 17. Sparta has been bowling over some of the best teams in America in the course of its tour. It will meet the Celtic Club of Canada at Chicago, tomorrow. Starting time here tomorrow will be 3:15. The admission charge is 75 cents.

Billy Foley, manager of the Ben Miller team, has charge of the St. Louis eleven and has been assisted in his job of coaching by Harry Ratican and Tate Brady. Although no definite combination has been outlined, St. Louis will probably start the game with the following lineup:

Bartnett, goal; Erbe and Mencke, fullbacks; Fink, Burke and Oster, halfbacks; O'Reilly, Bochnicek, Hand, Hansen and Mulroy, forwards. There will be several changes as the game progresses.

Following is a sketch of the regular members of the Solvay club:

L. Foster, goalkeeper, not long over from Ireland. Played for Barn, one of the strongest junior teams in Belfast. Safe and reliable. There are several good goalkeepers in Detroit, but none better than Foster.

William Conner, right fullback, a newcomer to the Detroit district, yet one who is rapidly coming into prominence as a defender of class. A former 5 and 10 mile runner. Played previously in the Toronto district, earning selection on interprovincial teams. Of Scottish birth.

Sam Abernethy, left fullback. This player is probably the most noteworthy performer at this time in the State of Michigan. Before coming to Detroit, Sam was for several seasons a regular with the Kilmarnock and Ayr, Scottish League clubs. Here he has captained Detroit All-Scots for two seasons, been player-manager for Workers F. C. Sam wields a terrific left, having scored several sensational goals from free kicks as far as 40 yards out. In the last interstate game with Ohio, Sam tied the score in the last few minutes of play in this manner. Is deadly as a penalty kicker.

Watson, right half; formerly played fullback. Intercepts cleverly; is very whippy and a source of worry to opposing forwards. Irish.

Corrigan, center half. The pivot man, in a physical sense, is the giant of the team. One hundred and eighty pounds. His strong suit is tackling, and as may be judged from his weight, is difficult to push over. Will be in the thickest of the fray from start to finish. Hails from Schenectady, yet another Scotchman.

Judge, left half. Has been one of the mainstays of the club for several seasons. A real plodder, stocky built, tough and tireless. Not an artist, as the term is implied, but always very much in the game. Comes from the Pittsburg district.

Laird, outside right. This player is just coming into the recognition he has earned as an effective forager. Can make the best of opposition hustle, and then some. Is an auburn-haired Scotch laddie, who before leaving for the States was being secretly trained with a view to winning a "Powderhall," one of the Britishers' tid-bits in the sprinting line. Of a retiring disposition, yet a real "go-getter."

Mearns, inside right. An inside forward who is quite an artist at ball manipulation. Can turn almost on a dime. Prior to Solvay securing him he played for the best teams on the Canadian border. Mearns has been very much sought after by Detroit clubs this season and has turned several attractive offers. A heady player and a hard worker.

Redfern, center. Was a member of the selected Detroit League team that visited St. Louis last spring.

Robertson, inside left. Obtained this season from one of the strongest amateur teams in Detroit. Although but a youngster, has had sufficient experience to stand him in good stead in fast company.

Allen, outside left. The veteran of the team. Individually this player has commanded more newspaper space than any other player in Detroit. His services go back for 10 years as a familiar figure in Detroit soccer. Was with the Packard club when it opposed Ben Millers in the Western final of the national cup competition in 1920.

Mrs. Baehr Wins And Retains Her District Title

Defeats Miss Hagemeyer in Straight Sets at Triple A, 6-3, 6-4.

Mrs. Melicent Baehr retained her title as women's district tennis champion by defeating Miss Lottie Hagemeyer in the final match yesterday at Triple A, 6—3, 6—4.

A high wind hampered both players but the champion's service was strong and her placements effective enough to take the match. She will have her name engraved on the Elise Werner trophy which has been put in competition for the first time this year.

The semifinal match in the doubles flight between Mrs. Bess Brouster and Angela Henske and Virginia Baer and Ann Kaiman was called off in the second set and will be continued this afternoon. The former team won the first set, 6—4, and they were tied at two games each when time was called.

Bowling Stars To Be Here for Tourney, Oct. 23

About 416 Players Will Enter Peterson's Classic, Many From City Included.

Peterson's classic individual bowling tournament will be held for the first time in St. Louis Oct. 23 and 24. Entries will close at midnight Sunday. Promoters of the tournament would like to have as many as 200 entries from St. Louis. Applications should be sent to the Schaefer-Delmar Recreation Alleys, Delmar boulevard near Kingshighway.

The entrance fee is $25 a man, with $3 bowling fee. The first prize is $2500 in cash and a medal valued at $500.

Champion bowlers from all parts of the country are entered in this the biggest money tournament of the year. A special train from Chicago will bring bowlers from that part of the country to St. Louis. There will be about 416 players in the games.

BIG TEN CONFERENCE BARS LIQUOR AT GAMES

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Oct. 9.—The "little brown jug," the bright silver flask and the shiny glass bottle are under fire in the Big Ten Conference.

With betting and gridiron ticket-scalping, liquor must go, if a drive under way at the Big Ten universities, launched following an uplift drive of the Collegiate Club of Chicago, is successful.

A resolution, adopted by the club and indorsed by athletic directors, attacked alleged objectionable features at Midwest conference athletic activities, especially football. The resolution was indorsed by directors at Minnesota, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Purdue, Michigan, Northwestern, Ohio, Chicago and Wisconsin.

The resolution set forth that the public has criticized intercollegiate football games because they were made "the occasion for mass violation of prohibition laws, for gambling and betting and ticket scalping."

LEWIS WOULD FORFEIT $5000 RATHER THAN GO THROUGH WITH MATCH

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Oct. 9.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, one of the crop of claimants to the world's heavyweight wrestling championship, yesterday declared he would forfeit $5000 rather than go through with a match with Joe Stecher of Nebraska, scheduled to be held within the next 60 days.

Lewis told Seth Strelinger, chairman of the State Athletic Commission, he did not like the way the match between Stecher and John Pesek was handled last Wednesday and spoke in no uncertain terms his feelings against Stecher and Lou Daro, promoter of the bout.

KEEPING UP THE FARCE.

CHAPTER 29.

WHEN Doris came down to breakfast in the garden the following morning, she found young Hartley already there, extraordinarily handsome and immaculte in white flannels.

He rose and placed a chair for her behind the coffee service.

"Will you do the honors? I'm famished."

She examined him critically with green eyes half closed between their curling lashes.

"You don't look as though you'd had a hard night," she murmured.

"Oh, as to that," he shrugged, "when I joined Tommy last night he was already pretty well tanked and one more drink put him under. So we went home and turned in. I was saved from my martyr's role."

"But," said Doris practically, "you can't depend on such luck every night."

"No. But I think I've found an easy solution. I've been scouting around and I've found an unoccupied wing at the rear of the house. Meekins tells me that this villa was built by a writer with nerves, who couldn't stand the noises of his family. He had a bedroom, bath and study tacked on at the back of the house. It shuts off completely, only connected by a passage, almost a separate villa, you might say. Now, why can't you complain that the sound of the sea in that front suite keeps you awake and ask for the rear one? Even my family's old-fashioned ideas have to concede modern nerves. I'll swear I can't sleep in the front suite. And there we are! It ought to be simple."

Doris agreed that it sounded so, and poured his coffee, adding cream and sugar with charming intentness.

He lay back in his chair and watched her.

The little wretch was pretty as the deuce, he had to admit. He supposed that in other circumstances, if he had been heart whole and fancy free, he would have found undeniable pleasure in this breakfast en tete-a-tete. But while his conscious eyes approved Doris, his thoughts were all for Camilla.

How much lovelier she would have been giving him coffee, he thought. She would be wearing one of those blue and silver affairs that she donned when she served him tea in the firelight of her salon—one of those lovely creations that were like perfumed mist and went to his head.

It never occurred to him, naturally, that Camilla would never in a million years allow herself to be caught at a breakfast table in bright sunlight. She was rarely ready to face the world before noon, and then only after extensive preparations, and she always turned her back to the light.

"What do you want to do today?" He brought himself out of his dreaming with difficulty. "Bathing—lunch at one of the hotels—tea somewhere?"

"I'd like to go in bathing, though I never swam in salt water," Doris confessed.

He stifled a groan.

"Oh, I suppose I've got to teach you."

"I'd much rather drown," Doris told him pleasantly. "After all, salt water is easier than fresh, isn't it? And I can swim like a fish in a river or lake."

He lit a cigarette gloomily.

"Can you be ready at 11? All the world bathes then. And you'll have to go to the shops for a bathing suit. I believe I neglected that in the equipment you have."

"I'll manage nicely," Doris assured him, as she rose to go into the house.

"Oh, by the way," he drawled, "you may be interested in reading about yourself. It's all in the morning paper."

He handed her the society page of a Continental edition of an American newspaper.

Her startled eyes found a lengthy account of the arrival of the honeymooning Hartleys at the villa of "the distinguished banker, Mr. Malcolm Hartley of New York, who has leased the charming Villa Poinciana for several seasons, and who, though something of a recluse, is prominent in the fashionable American colony of the Riviera."

"It gets worse and worse, doesn't it?" said Hartley with a wry smile. "'Oh, what a tangled web we weave,'" he ended with a shrug.

Doris left him without making any comment. She was thinking: What if that news gets back to America? What will Camilla think? And Cousin Henry? And Aunt Elsie?

But she refused to have her buoyant morning spirits dampened by any such distressing forebodings, and loftily disregarding young Hartley's invitation for 11 o'clock, she pressed the efficient Meekins into service, purchased a bathing costume at a shop to which he piloted her, and still under his escort, had a glorious hour in the surf.

Just as she was coming out, wrapped in a gay and most becoming peignoir, she encountered young Hartley, staring wrathfully from a group of bathers under a beach sunshade. She waved to him airily and continued on her way to join the discreet Meekins waiting at a distance.

Rapid footsteps overtook her and she turned to find Hartley hurrying after her. He was accompanied by a stout, red-faced young man with a jolly smile.

"This is Tom Jessups, D—er—Mrs. Hartley," he said with the best grace he could muster. "He's yelling to meet you. All I can say is that I'm sorry for you, because, although he means well, he's an awful pest," and he turned and walked off, leaving Doris alone with the beaming youth.

TWO CONQUESTS.

CHAPTER 30.

THE beaming young man with the jolly, red face, who looked to Doris like a young edition of her Cousin Henry—Camilla's husband—said:

"I say, I didn't know old Jack was a bridegroom and all that sort of thing, until I read the papers this morning. Honest I didn't. He never mentioned it to me. I hope you don't hold it against me that I got him drunk last night—or maybe it was the other way round. I say, I have a hazy idea—didn't he spend the night at my place?"

"Were you really as badly off as that?" Doris countered laughingly.

"Well, she acknowledged ruefully, and added with distinct relief: "Then you're not sore at him or anything like that? He looked so confoundedly cut up when he saw you out there wallowing in the sea all by yourself"——

"But I'm not by myself," explained Doris. "My—er—father-in-law's secretary is waiting for me." She motioned toward Meekins who lurked anxiously in the background.

"Oh, I see. But I say," went on the young man, "can't you manage to have tea with me today—you and Jack, of course," he added hastily. "He won't bite my head off, I dare say, if I suggest it."

"I think he'd be awfully—pleased," said Doris, just saving herself in time from saying "relieved."

She returned to the villa to dress for lunch. On her way downstairs she encountered young Hartley who said frigidly:

"I can't quite see why you chose to precipitate a good deal of gossip by going to the beach alone."

"I'm sorry," said Doris, and added with more truth than tact: "But I really do enjoy myself more when you're not around."

"You should reserve that declaration for the second stage of matrimony—after the honeymoon has waned," he told her, and opened the door for her to pass into the salon.

They lunched alone except for the presence of Hartley's Aunt Ada.

"There's no use denying it," she announced in sprightly fashion, "Women have more stamina than men. Look at Howard and Malcolm. Both laid up after that tiny little journey from Paris, and here, Doris and I are blooming, all full of pep, and looking for something diverting to happen."

Her nephew murmured something which sounded suspiciuosly like: "Unfortunately."

In the course of the afternoon, Doris' effects were transferred to the former quarters of the nervous author, a charmingly detached suite in the rear of the villa. She was enchanted. The ex-study of the temperamental man of letters provided a delightful little private sitting room with a broad balcony which overlooked the end of the garden. With a spacious, airy bedroom and a shining bath, she felt herself to be in possession of a citadel from which she could emerge refreshed and prepared to face the emergencies which her equivocal position forced upon her.

Not that she needed either refreshment or preparation! She was enjoying herself. Her superb calm, her remoteness from worry, served her splendidly. She couldn't be caught in a tight corner, because when the corner was ready and the situation prepared to drive her into it, she simply wasn't there! She was away off somewhere in spirit, admiring a sunset or the sweep of the sea against the coppery blue of the sky, or thinking dreamily that a frosted chocolate sundae would be just the thing to make the moment perfect.

Hartley had told her that they were to have tea with Tom Jessups somewhere or other, so when she was ready, she went down to the drawing room, cool and fragrant in contrast with the burning sunlight in the garden.

The first thing she saw was a splendid grande piano, its lid invitingly elevated. She sighed.

"I dare say I really ought to," she thought reluctantly, thinking of those days and days without practice—that happy holiday from endless scales.

Seating herself, she began to play softly and after a while, let her glorious voice pour forth.

A shadow darkening the French window beside her, brought her round on the piano bench.

"Go on!" said Hartley Sr. He was leaning on two sticks and his sharp features were sharper than ever with pain. He let himself down carefully into a chair.

"Do you know any real songs—not grand opera—something with a tune?" he demanded.

Doris nodded and drifted softly into "Just a Song at Twilight." She followed with "Kentucky Babe," then a few Negro spirituals, and ended with a Russian folk song, poignant with pathos and exquisite minors.

"Doris," said Hartley Sr., unexpectedly, "I have an idea you're a nice girl."

Doris rose impulsively and going behind his chair, slipped her arms around his neck, and dropped a kiss on his hair.

"Thank you," she said, "I've always tried to be."

He was silent for a moment and then the old, formidable spirit reasserted itself.

"Will you ring for Meekins. I'm going to take a nap."

He was not yet ready to yield, but she knew she had taken a long step toward winning his regard. It troubled her for a moment. She didn't want to win.

GOWNS OF MANY STYLES SEEN IN FASHION P

By MARGUERITE MARTYN.

THESE sketches, made in the dressing rooms of the maid and matrons of honor at the Veiled Phophet's ball Wednesday night, reveal something of the great variety which characterizes the new season's modes. All the fashion writers are commenting upon the wide range and latitude of choice in lines, silhouettes, fabrics, styles being allowed by the fashion creators just now. Silhouettes vary from the princesse to the bouffant. There are high and low waistlines and none at all. Some skirt hems barely reach the knees, others are ankle length, a few actually trail on the ground and others compromise by being short in front and long at the back or short on one side and long upon the other. Verily, it is a season in which every woman, being thus enabled to choose a style at once in the mode and becoming to her type, should manage always to look her best.

Describing the costumes sketched, first is a frock of white satin on slender draped lines. The short skirt is gathered toward the front into a bow-knot cabuchon of rhinestones. The blouse, cut rather high at the front, ends in two rhinestone-studded straps which cross at the back over an underblouse of chiffon studded with rhinestones.

Next, a slender gown of plain chiffon velvet combined with the same material brocaded in a small pattern upon chiffon is all in one shade of lipstick red. A shirred panel of the plain velvet is set into the scant skirt for fullness and a scarf cut in one with the blouse and bordered with the brocade hangs from one shoulder down the back. This was Mrs. Floyd Augustine's gown.

All of one shade of almond green chiffon velvet is the third gown, the skirt of which has a puffed silhouette. Circular-cut panels placed at the hip line are gathered and turned under at the hem. The puffed panels are joined to a slim foundation in inverted scallops edged with rhinestones. This frock was worn by Miss Clarissa Dyer, a debutante.

Number four is a quaint gown of the period when skirts were flounced and bodices were tight and whaleboned. The b made of a piece of antique tapestry silk, flower patterned, t of old gold lace. A bouquet of old-fashioned flowers match pattern in the silk is appliqued upon the skirt. Gold cloth pa attached to jeweled anklets accompanied the costume. It w by Miss Sallie Green, a debutante, who said she purchased i fornia, "where the movie actresses get their costumes."

Fifth represents another "picture gown," worn by Mis Rumsey, a debutante, of distinctive, almost exotic, type. dark hair which she wears smoothly parted and drawn down ears into a knot at the back. Very becoming, with her cl plexion, was the gown of stiff metal brocade in one of th shades of green shot with gold. The plain, sleeveless bodice fitted easily, joining the skirt at a slightly below waistline, with a girdle and cabuchon of brilliants. The wi slightly distended at the hips is cut longer at back and sides the front and edged with a transparent hem of green tulle.

Some Menus For October

By HANNAH WING.

THE following recipes are suggested as being well suited to October menus:

Egg Plant and Tomato Puff.

Slice, pare and cut a medium-sized egg plant into pieces. Boil until tender and drain well. Mash and measure. Add an equal quantity of thick canned tomato and 1-3 to ½ cup of crumbs with 2 beaten eggs. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Bake in a moderate oven (300-350 degrees F.) till firm in the center.

Tomato and Corn Salad.

Use a thick slice of a large tomato for each salad. Spread with mayonnaise. On this heap corn which has been cooked on the cob and sliced off and dressed with French dressing. Sprinkle with chopped green pepper as a garnish.

Onion Souffle.

Cook onions in boiling salted water until soft, drain and force through a sieve; there should be one and one-fourth cups onion pulp. Melt four tablespoons butter, add four tablespoons flour and pour on gradually one-third cup water in which onions have been cooked and one-third cup cream; then add onion pulp and bring to the boil-point. Season with salt and pepper. Beat yolks of three eggs until thick and lemon colored and add to first mixture. Cut and fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry. Turn into a baking dish and bake 25 minutes in a moderate oven (350-400 degrees F.) Serve at once.

Peach Meringue Pie.

Fill a baked pie shell with sliced peaches, either fresh or cooked, sweetened to taste. Cover with a meringue and bake in a slow oven, 300 degrees F., 10 to 12 minutes.

Meringue.

Two eggs, one-quarter cup granulated sugar.

Beat the whites till stiff, then fold in the sugar. Add flavoring if desired.

MEDITATIONS —OF A— MARRIED WOMAN

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHAT IS YOUR "GESTURE?"

HAVE you a "gesture?" If not, GET one, immediately—or you will be as out-of-date as a last week's newspaper!

Nearly everything one does is a "gesture," these days, from wearing a monocle to shooting your husband.

With some women, smoking is a gesture—and with nearly all men love-making is a gesture, when it isn't a jest.

A girl doesn't marry the man she really wants, but the one who will make her marriage the most dramatic "gesture," the butler, the life-guard or the traffic cop; the one who will give her the most publicity—or the most money with which to cut a glittering figure.

* * *

A man doesn't pick out the woman who will make him happiest—but the one who will make the best "show-window," the most ornamental and expensive-looking thing he can find.

A woman doesn't wear her hair in the most becoming or the most comfortable fashion, but in the most grotesque and eccentric fashion—the one which will attract the most attention, and cause the most sensation.

The average woman doesn't abbreviate her skirts because she is naturally shameless or even because she is vain of her knees, but "just as a gesture," to catch the masculine eye—and put it OUT!

* * *

No woman chooses her clothes because they are beautiful, graceful or artistic, any more; she picks out the most bizzare, the most exotic, the most hideous things she can find—and consoles herself that she is "different."

* * *

"Be startling! Get in the limelight! Knock 'em dead!" These are the slogans of the day. Do ANYTHING—except the normal, the natural, or the expected!

Even "petting" is a gesture, with most girls. Men will never believe it; but any normal girl hates to be mauled or kissed by any man, with whom she is not at least temporarily a little bit in love. Honestly, it isn't a BIT thrilling to have a bristly cheek rubbed against yours—unless it is the cheek you love to touch. But, not to appear to be a "wild woman" would be to miss a "gesture!"

* * *

We are all like bad little boys, who feel that they MUST do some thing "perfectly awful," in order to "show off." We perform feats, swim the channel, get married in airplanes, endorse beauty creams, insult our friends, smoke a pipe, flirt with other women's husbands, and go about half-clad—all just as a "gesture."

* * *

And the greatest feat of the modern girl's life is to find a brand NEW "gesture"—something wilder, more striking, more startling, more bizzare and more ridiculous than any other woman has attempted.

* * *

A Home on Stilts.

There's nothing like a timely rest
To keep one at his very best.
—Old Mother Nature.

DANNY had been traveling now for several days, and he was getting pretty well tired out. You know, it doesn't do to do a thing too long without change. Everybody needs a rest. They say that work never kills, but it does if there is too much of it. Danny began to look around for a place to spend a few days in order that he might rest and freshen himself.

Most of the time Danny had been traveling in the marsh, and he didn't find any place that he wanted to stay longer than for a nap. But now he came in sight of something that made his heart jump right up in his mouth for pure joy. He knew what it was even from that distance. Yes, sir, it was a haystack. It looked just like the haystack in Farmer Brown's barnyard late in the fall. Danny loves haystacks. When he saw this he forgot he was tired. That haystack was still a long way off, but it was a haystack and that was enough to keep Danny going.

At last Danny reached it. Then he went all around it. Never had he seen a stack like this one before. It was on stilts. Yes, sir, it was on stilts. You see, it was on the marsh and that marsh was sometimes covered with water at extra high tide. So a great many big stakes had been driven into the marsh, leaving the tops above high water. On these had been built a stack of hay. It was salt hay. You know the grass that grows on the marshes is salt. Danny didn't know what to make of this haystack. He ran in and out among the stakes and then he made up his mind that this was the best place he had found since he left home. It was no trouble at all to climb up one of those stakes and burrow into that mass of hay. There he had the softest kind of a bed and no one in the Great World would think of looking for him there.

White-tail alighted right on top of that very haystack, and there he Sat and sat and sat

Danny spent several days there. In fact, he hated to leave his home on stilts. "I wish Nanny were over here," said he. "If Nanny Meadow Mouse were here what a wonderful time we would have. This would be a wonderful place to spend the winter, if only I had food enough."

But thinking of winter reminded him of home again, and in spite of his comfortable quarters he began to grow homesick. The very next morning when he poked his head outside almost the very first thing he saw was Whitetail the Marsh Hawk. Whitetail was sailing back and forth to the marsh, looking breakfast. paces between the skirt panels, and almost as solidly upon the e and full circular panels of the skirt. Diamonds outlining and g patterns added further to the brilliance of this shining ent.

Seventh in the picture is a frock in shades of hyacinth blue and . The bodice is of metal cloth, into which is woven the two s, the upper part of the skirt is hyacinth velvet, the lower part lace, the two materials joined in deep scallops with an applique er leaves.

Eighth, a gown built on long, clinging lines, was worn by a e, Mrs. Lew Rumsey. It is constructed of brocade in dark Oriental colors and a diagonally striped pattern. The skirt has a floating panel, gathered into a jeweled cabuchon at one hip. An ivory comb was worn in the dark hair, with deep pendant jeweled earrings.

A chic little black velvet frock was worn by Mrs. Robert A. Burns. The neckline, deeply oval, the sash tied at the back, the edge of the short skirt and a circular panel at the front, are embroidered in an elaborate pattern of brilliants. The girdle is fastened at the front with a bar of brilliants, and the heels of the slippers are studded with brilliants.

Last in the row is a tulle frock, typical in line and material of a number worn by the debutantes. This one is of black and pink tulle, the full skirt made of alternate layers of the two colors, cut in points, the edges picoted. A sash of black tulle ties in a huge bow at the back. A foundation slip of pink appliqued with French flowers was discernible through the transparent layers of tulle.

A Facial Beauty Massage

By LUCREZIA BORI

A WELL-ROUNDED contour of the face is a most valuable asset to beauty, for thin, sunken cheeks will add 10 years to the age of a young woman, while an older woman will lose 10 years in appearance if she is clever enough and patient enough to keep facial hollows away.

Plenty of sleep and a light diet often helps to keep the body slim and the face full. The reason for this apparent contradiction is that the face muscles respond to one's mental state quicker than other muscles of the body do and so a fresh, rested mind is the first step toward a fresh, rested face.

Massage and a good tissue building cream are also important in plumping up hollow cheeks, and the following treatment should be taken each night just before retiring. There is a definite reason for taking this treatment at night, for the massage rests the tired muscles and tissues while the building cream feeds them generously, making a splendid foundation for the work done by nature while one is sleeping.

First wash the face thoroughly, using warm water, pure soap and a rough wash-cloth. Then rinse the skin in clear, warm water and pat it dry. Apply the tissue-building cream, using the fingertips with a light rotating motion, beginning at the lips and moving the fingers up toward the temples. When the cheeks have been well covered with the cream continue the gentle rotary movement for five minutes, when the excess cream should be removed with a soft cloth.

By tapping the fingertips over the cheeks firmly and quickly until the skin tingles, circulation will be stimulated and the skin invigorated, so this is the next step. Then fill the cheeks with air until they are as tight as the well-known drum and stroke them with an upward movement five times, release the air, and repeat three times. Release the air quickly by simply opening the mouth. Do not try to blow it out, as this puckers the lips and will, if done nightly for any length of time, bring about a new problem—that of removing lip wrinkles.

RECIPES FROM "My Old Virginia Cook Book"

Salmon Cutlets.

Pick with a fork into small pieces one can of salmon. Add one cup hot mashed potatoes. Add one beaten egg, one tablespoonful water and a little salt and paprica to taste. Stir all together. Mold into cutlet shapes, roll in egg and bread crumbs and fry in deep lard. Serve hot, garnishing with parsley.

Pickled Onions.

Use small white onions. Remove the ends and outer skins and wash thoroughly. Cover with a brine made of three-fourths of a cup of salt to one quart of boiling water. Let stand 24 hours. Boil with the onions for three or four minutes and then drain.

Pack the onions, when drained, in jars with small strips of red peppers, a few cloves and bits of whole mace. Fill the jars with scalding vinegar in which has been boiled a half cup of sugar to every two quarts of vinegar. Seal while hot.

RHYMING OPTIMIST HISTORY.

By Aline Michaelis.

I LOVE to know what men have done long centuries ago, how they have met the changing days, clasped joy and conquered woe. And so I seek the story here on history's vital page, which shows how kings and knaves have lived from changeful age to age. I find in all, the songs they sang, the mighty deeds they did, the thoughts they thought, the dreams they dreamed; no love no hatred hid. The yellowed page of history lays all these secrets bare; shows ancient men were kin to us in rapture and despair. Those savage tribes, who aeons back, by sailless oceans dwelt, they, too, knew hope's most fair mirage, fear's keenest arrows felt. So from all these who long ago went down the ways I tread, I learn to meet both joy and woe, to face both hope and dread.

Grape Grandulia.

Skin and seed three cupfuls of ripe black grapes. Throw the skin into two cupfuls of water and cook until the water is colored, then strain out. Put in two cupfuls of water and when melted add the grapes and cool until the grapes are done. Add a tablespoonful of gelatine that has been dissolved in a little warm water, and melt all together clear. Turn into a shallow wet mold to stiffen. When ready to serve, serve a slice of the grape over a brick of coffee cream, and pour a cupful of coffee, a cupful of sugar, a teaspoonful of vanilla and a rounded teaspoonful of cornstarch dissolved in a little water. Keep warm until time to serve.

Potato Waffles.

Boil and mash a half pound of potatoes. Beat in a pint and a half of milk, a little salt, a teaspoonful of sugar and a pint of flour. Beat until smooth. Add a half cake of compressed yeast that has been dissolved in a little warm water and set to rise for two hours. Then add the beaten yolks of four eggs and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Mix well and let rise for a half hour, then cook in the usual way.

The Fad for Pillows discover pillows in most unexpected places and, surprising to say, most of us like them. Take, for instance, dining chairs with distant, formal backs. What is more delightful when the distance than one of those thick pillows of needlepoint? Not the lace kind but the old-fashioned worsted pillows used long ago. The work is done with a tapestry or crownstitch, or the over-all diagonal stitch, and the background covers the canvas that the design is woven on. The pillow is boxed with a wide satin band and there is no right or wrong side to the pillow. Square - muffin - shaped pillows covered with changeable silk are great favorites. Sometimes the pillows are finished with deep pinked ruffles, again they have corded ruffles that cling close to the edge. The shaded silks used match the decorative scheme of the furnishings.

IS HOMICIDE, AT TIMES, REALLY JUSTIFIABLE?

—By BRIGGS

The Man on the Sandbox

by L. C. Davis

BACKWASH OF THE SERIES

THE outlook was propitious for the Cardinals that day,
The score was two to one with just an inning more to play;
Then Gehrig popped to Thevenow who lost it in the sun,
Which planted Lou on second with the Yankees' tying run.

From forty thousand throats or more there rose a dismal groan
Ten thousand hollered "tough luck," thirty-thousand hollered "bone!"
And when a moment later Pasch-al's single tied the score
We'll tell the wall-eyed world that forty-thousand guys were sore.

The Cards were bravely fighting with their backs against the wall,
Like gallant Billy Southworth
ball.
But in the tenth the Yankees scored the run that turned the trick
And forty-thousand rabid fans were feeling mighty sick.

And so the teams departed for the Eastern battle grounds
In little old Manhattan where they'll fight the final rounds;
And if old Alexander brings the bacon home today,
Jess Haines, the old reliable, will cop the final fray.

TOO TRUE.

If the Cardinal pitchers had given all their bases on balls last Wednesday to Babe Ruth instead of scattering them the way they did there wouldn't have been so many records and fences broken.

The Prophet's ball at the Coliseum and the Profits ball at Sportsman's Park were both hummers.

The size of the melon is known but the way it is going to be cut still is to be determined.

Incidentally it is the largest melon on record. Even the loser's slice will make a square meal.

AT LAST.

FOR forty years we've hoped and prayed,
Our money, lost, on bets we made
To no avail.
The Browns and Cards—the cause unknown,
Instead of bringing pennants home
Were doomed to fail.

And then the Cards took up the fight,
And played the game with all their might,
And did not stop
Until the heated race was run,
Until the National flag was won,
With us on top.

And now world series games are
And people stand from night till dawn
In patient ranks.
"Come on St. Louis!" shout the news,
"This series we can never lose!
We'll beat the Yanks!"
